2 CHELSEA GIRLS HELD UP

Today

From Cold to Hot
Room for 1,000,000,000
Poor King of Kings
Two States Dry

By Arthur Brisbane

MIAMI, FLA., Feb. 28—This is written going south through Florida, newspapers all the way down from New York complaining of bitter cold, thick snow along the track much of the way. When you run into Florida and turn east toward the Atlantic and the Gulf Stream, no more bitter cold.

The black pig and her young ones just outside the window, mercifully spared from the government "farrow sow" slaughter of the innocents, are rooting in hot sunlight.

A young colored woman, dressed in beautiful wide stripes, knitting outside her door, has chosen a place in the shade. Room abundant and winter sunlight for fifty millions more down here, and some day they will come when men learn how to balance production and distribution and stop cheating and killing each other.

One hundred millions and more will live in California, champion all-the-year-round sun parlor of the world. Complete development of the airplane, swift flying, slow landing, transportation at normal cost, will make available for one thousand million more Americans beautiful sites now neglected on hilltops and mountains. Twice the present population of the earth could live comfortably and happily here in the United States, and will, some day.

The State of Texas alone, intensively cultivated, could feed the two thousand millions on earth today.

Get your railroad ticket, steamship ticket, airplane reservation or your 1935 automobile, travel and see this country. Now it is cheaper to travel than to stay at home. Not to own a car is extravagance.

Haile Selassie, the first Emperor of Abyssinia and "King of Kings" of Ethiopia, who does not like Mussolini's looks, or his threats, writes conciliatory letters to Mussolini and the Italian King. Thousands of Selassie's Mohammedan subjects are leaving Abyssinia to join the Italian army, eager to fight against their Emperor. They dislike the Abyssinian brand of Christianity. Semi-barbarous, primitive people hate each other as dogs hate foxes. In India the Mohammedans make it easy for the British to hold down the Hindus. Providence seems to be on the side of the higher civilizations.

Somebody sent Senator Huey Long a bomb, deadly on the outside, innocent inside. Senator Huey Long, said to "blame J. Pierpont Morgan and Standard Oil for part of his troubles," is probably mistaken. J. Pierpont Morgan and Standard Oil do not send bombs to anybody, and if they did the bombs would explode.

Rupert Peyton, of the Louisiana House of Representatives, amusing himself disrespectfully at the expense of Senator Long, interrupts proceedings in the Legislature to remark:

"I have just received a mysterious package containing a bomb. There was a message with it, saying 'Beware, beware, we will kill you to pieces.' Signed, 'J. Pierpont Morgan and the Standard Oil Company.'"

Mr. Peyton told the Legislature:

"I left my rifle at home and I want a special bodyguard of a couple of companies of militia."

Sometimes ridicule is more effective than abuse.

Alabama votes dry, stands, with Kansas, one of the two dry States of the Union. Northern racketeers and bootleggers must not hastily conclude that Alabama offers a paradise of profit. First, Alabama knows how to make corn whiskey at a price per gallon that would discourage any bootlegger; second, the men of Alabama are not as long suffering as men of New York. Racketeers would find Alabama is a bad climate for their health.

Passing through Philadelphia you read of a kidnaping among gangsters involving an unusual display of brutality. William Weiss, Philadelphia racketeer, kidnaped and murdered, was kept for several days before he was killed in a "dog house," four feet high, seven feet long, "weighted down with scrap iron to make sure that he would not crawl away." Two men are on trial for the kidnaping and murder and will probably be convicted. Two others that planned the crime have been executed for another murder.

Racketeering may be profitable, but it is not safe.

A kind word for whiskey comes from Kansas City, Mo. Woodrow Waler, 23 days old, requiring an operation for a stomach obstruction, could not endure the use of ordinary anaesthetic. A small sack of sugar, soaked in whiskey, was placed in the baby's mouth. Plain alcoholic intoxication took the place of anaesthesia, and the operation was performed successfully.

FABER in New Life FIGHT

MILLENS STAY IN DEDHAM

The Millen-Faber case developed unexpected angles today.

Defense counsel revealed last-resort plans to save Abe Faber from the electric chair by another sanity test—this time in a state hospital.

Plans to rush through a law for the immediate transfer of the condemned trio from Dedham jail to State Prison were abandoned.

Murton Millen's plea for a sight of his jailed wife, Norma, was denied, and she was criticised by her father-in-law, permitted to visit his doomed sons for the first time since their last escape attempt.

William R. Scharton, counsel for the Technology graduate, Faber, disclosed for the first time that he has another defense card besides appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

Plea to Curley

In the event of an adverse decision in the nation's highest court, he will seek to have Faber committed for 35-day observation in Dancevers, Scharton said.

"If I am turned down in the United States supreme court I will appeal t oGovernor Curley, the state department of mental diseases, the department of correction and the courts for a 35-day commitment of Faber to Bridgewater or Danvers."

He said he was confident his request would be granted for a final determination of Faber's mental condition.

Scharton pointed out the law provides that an insane person cannot be executed, even if the condemned does not become insane until just before the scheduled execution.

In connection with his application for another sanity test for Faber, Scharton said he was prepared to call Dedham jail guards to testify to Faber's unusual actions in his cell.

The jail, it appeared almost positive late today, will remain the place of imprisonment for the Millens and Faber until April 18, ten days before the start of the week set for their execution.

Abandon Transfer

Plans and hopes of transferring them immediately to state prison were abandoned when new difficulties arose to block the enabling legislation on Beacon Hill.

Those difficulties were principally apparent in a belief that if retroactive legislation to provide for the transfer is enacted, technicalities might be raised to delay the carrying out of the sentence.

The bill passed a new first reading in the House today and will not come up for second reading until next Wednesday.

In the Dedham jail pit Murton and Irving were visited by their father, Joseph Millen.

Family visits were ended by the jail authorities after the last Millen escape attempt two months ago.

One cincession that will never be restored to Murton, jail officers said, is a sight of Norma, his young wife, whose release from the same jail is not expected until after her husband is executed.

Last night, Murton dropped his snarling attitude of defiance and entreated:

"Let me see her for a few minutes. She's a good kid. I know more about her and her suffering than any of you."

Enemies of Oath Scored

Leaders of veterans' organizations, launching a concerted attack on "red" activities, assailed the opposition to the proposed teachers' oath of allegiance and pointed to Communists as responsible for all school strikes in this section.

A favorable legislative committee report on the teachers' oath bill will be made early next week, it was learned at the State House.

Leo M. Harlow, former Legion state commander, termed the opposition to the teachers' bill, at a hearing yesterday, as "distinctly unpatriotic and un-American."

The Veterans of Foreign Wars are joined with the American Legion in the anti-Communist drive.

At a meeting of the Alexander Graham Bell post, American Legion, Ralph Lewis, Worcester County commander, declared that every school strike in Greater Boston was the work of Communists.

A certain man and woman, with headquarters in a "red school" in the South End, instigated the strikes, he said.

The speaker further declared that Providence, R. I., has new become an Eastern headquarters for Communists who left the Pacific coast after the general strike there.

Holmes Now Holds Gain

Doctors Satisfied at Jurist's Condition

By Associated Press

Washington, March 1—Physicians attending Oliver Wendell Holmes reported after a noon visit today that the retired Supreme Court justice was "holding his own."

The attending doctors were reported as saying:

"The fact that he is holding his own is very encouraging."

It was learned that President Roosevelt has been keeping in touch with the jurist's condition by telephone.

Francis Biddle, chairman of the Labor Relations Board, an early caller, declared:

"They told me that he had spent a very fine night and was considerably improved.

"Why, they even told me that when Felix Frankfurter, Harvard professor, was walking by the bed the Justice went like this (Biddle then thumbed his nose) and laughed heartily."

BRUNO Jeered in JAIL

UNDER DEATH HOUSE TAUNTS

Trenton, N. J., March 1—Other murderers waiting to die jeered Bruno Richard Hauptmann in the state prison death house today—the third anniversary of the Lindbergh baby kidnaping and murder.

Their jeers and taunts, the croaking of doomed slayers who consider themselves better men than Hauptmann, echoed between the bleak walls.

"Where were you three years ago today?" they called.

Again and again they flung the challenge.

Is Loneliest Killer

The man convicted and sentenced to death for the crime that makes him an outcast even among other slayers, crouched and cringed in the far corner of his bare cell—and made no answer.

In all the world there was no lonelier man than Hauptmann on this anniversary.

None spoke to him except to taunt him. His guards would not play checkers or cards with him. His meals were handed to him in silence.

But he had his memories. Even if that will of his had been able to reject memory and allow him to forget—the others would not let him.

And while Hauptmann fought off those things they would not let him forget, word came from New York that before he dies for the murder of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., he may be officially accused of two more killings.

Westchester County District Attorney Walter A. Ferris has reopened investigation of the unsolved seven-year-old murder of Mrs. Irene Vingold Rein, 39, and her 21-year-old son, Leslie, in their Yonkers home, November 26, 1927.

They were shot when they surprised a prowler who gained entrance to their second story apartment by use of a three-section ladder strikingly similar to that ladder Hauptmann used to appall the world three years ago tonight.

Yonkers Police Captain Ford, who is active in reopening the case, said:

"Hauptmann had been working as a carpenter in the Bronx just below the Yonkers city line in 1927. It is significant that in that year he moved to the Bronx from upper Park avenue, Manhattan."

PRAJADHIPOK Quits Siam's Throne

Cranleigh, Eng., Mar. 1 (AP)—King Prajadhipok of Siam was announced by his private secretary today to have abdicated the throne.

The King's rejection of his throne follows months of internal disputes in Siam over governmental matters.

The King's action brings his 11-year-old nephew, Prince Ananda, to the steps of the throne. The boy is the son of King Prajadhipok's late brother, Prince Mahidol

Prince Mahidol, who died in 1929, lived in the United States a number of years. He was known there as "Mr. Songkala" and studied medicine at Harvard. Later he lived in Boston.

WOMEN ACCUSE STATE ST. FIRM

Trouble was visited today from four points upon the brokerage firm of Dill & Company, Inc., 148 State street.

Harold L. McCormick of Belmont, the corporation president, was reported to the Securities Division of the Department of Public Utilities as missing.

The Securities Division held a hearing on the question of revoking the corporate license and issuing a fraud order against the concern.

Three women creditors filed a petition in bankruptcy against the corporation in federal court.

Complaints were filed with the Division of Securities in Maine and suit for $4500 was entered by complainants to recover on the company's bond for alleged failure to deliver stock or return money.

No representative of the corporation appeared at the hearing at the Public Works Building in Nashua street, presided over by John C. Hull, public utilities commissioner and director of the Blue Sky Division.

Attorney William Anderson, counsel for Julia E. Cox of Wilmington, one of the Massachusetts complainants, testified he was told McCormick had been missing for several days.

The information had been given him, Anderson declared, by Harold Fleming, a market letter writer in the Dill office, who said McCormick had had many calls and his associates "were getting worried about him."

Seven former customers of the brokerage concern, four of them women, testified they had failed to receive either stock or money from transactions.

Mrs. Cox testified she sold 100 shares of Investors Trading Corporation through the brokerage house and never received [illegible] proceeds.

Similar testimony was given by Mrs. Beulah A. Stone of South Sudbury, Mr. and Mrs. William Dudley of Wayland, Mrs. Bertha B. Hanson of South Natick and Arthur W. Worden of Groton.

The creditors who filed the bankruptcy petition are Mrs. Stone of South Sudbury, with a claim for $120; Esther E. Peterson of Boston, claiming $200, and Mrs. Hanson of Natick, claiming $225.

BANDIT Pair Get $200

THEN ESCAPE IN STOLEN CAR

Using a car stolen less than an hour before, two armed bandits held up two girls on a Chelsea sidewalk today and robbed one of $200.

Scores of pedestrains were within hailing distance when the two bandits rode up to the curb at Fifth and Walnut streets.

Miss Jeanne Karp, 25, bookkeeper for a metal concern, and her friend, Miss Diana Maro, 20, living with her at 99 Bellingham street, Chelsea, were shouldered against the wall of a building and guns were pressed into their sides.

From the hands of Miss Karp, a red leather folder was seized, containing $200, which she had drawn from the Lincoln National Bank.

The bandits then leaped back into the gray coupe and fled in the direction of Everett. The frightened girls ran to the office of Harry Cohen & Co., in Fifth street, where Mis Karp is employed, and from there called police.

A description and the number of the bandit car were sent out over the radio. It was learned that the machine was reported stolen in Halden shortly before.

REFUGEES Flee Saar; THREE SHOT

By Associated Press

Forbach, France, March 1—Two hundred refugees from the Saar Basin territory, who said they were fleeing from Nazi threats, crossed the border into France today.

The refugees include 90 who were detectives and gendarmes in the former Saarland police department.

Three refugees were said by the exiles to have been shot and wounded by Nazis near Gudingen.

Inhabitants of the French frontier expressed indignation over reports that young Nazis had burned a French flag near there yesterday.

The refugees were put on a train for Bordeaux after their Saar police uniforms had been exchanged for civilian clothes.

BASIN Restored to REICH

LEAGUE GIVES UP MANDATE

By International News Service

Saarbruecken, March 1 — Twenty-five persons were carried off in stretchers and scores fainted today when the Saar's celebration over the return to Germany reached its climax with a huge parade before Chancellor Hitler.

By Associated Press

Saarbruecken, Saar Basin Territory, Germany, March 1—Adolph Hitler came to the Saar today and the population of the erstwhile League of Nations' territory went wild with adulation of Reichsfuehrer.

This was the day when the Saar basin territory, lopped off from Germany by the World War and for the last 15 years under the government of the League of Nations, went back to German sovereignty.

To celebrate the event, Hitler flew by airplane from Berlin to Mannheim, the last landing field before Saarbruecken, for the local airport was flooded by recent heavy rains. With him was Franz Von Papen, former vice-chancellor and now minister to Austria.

Hitler arrived at 12:50 p. m. Ahead of him stretched streets covered with flags and bunting and lined with Nazi Storm Troopers, resplendent in fresh uniforms.

"Heil Fuehrer"

For 25 minutes he drove through the streets, deafening with shouts of "Heil!"

The arms of the stormers, police, aviation men and citizens raised in the Nazi salute, formed a veritable arch of humanity through which the former Austrian army corporal, now leader of Germany, passed in triumph.

The Saarlanders again are Germans.

In the name of the League of Nations, which administered the productive area from the day the Treaty of Versailles became effective, Baron Pompeo Aloisi of Italy formally transferred the territory to German sovereignty, before Hitler arrived.

Wilhelm Frick, Nazi minister of the Interior, accepted for the Reich and the mandate of the January 13 plebiscite was fulfilled.

The brief ceremony took place in the government building along the Saar river, while thousands stood outside in a drizzling rain.

Colonel G. G. Knox, who, as high commissioner, governed the territory while under the League's control, was not present.

Baron Aloisi succeeded the Englishman yesterday, to hold office only until today's formalities were concluded.

Troops March In

Simultaneously with the transfer, seven columns of Storm Troopers, each 1,000 strong, crossed the obliterated frontier which until today separated the Saar Basin from its homeland.

The troopers marched along seven different roads and "occupied" the nearest villages, where they joined with the inhabitants in celebrating the restoration.

Once the League of Nations' authority had been set aside, the German officials went immediately to City Hall where Frick inducted Joseph Buerckel as "Little Dictator" of the valley.

From there the Minister of the Interior sent a thrill through the exultant German nation as he solemnly announced over the radio "Hoist the flags." This was the prearranged signal for the Reich to begin its celebrations.

At 7 a. m. Nazi leaders visited cemeteries and placed wreaths on the graves of former prominent Saarlanders.

Thanksgiving services were held in all churches beginning at 8 a. m.

LINDBERGH CRIME WAS PLOTTED HERE

GERMAN CONSUL OPENS PROBE

In the hands of German Consul-General Johannes Borchers of New York, was information today that may sensationally overshadow the arrest and conviction of Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

According to reports this information places the birth of the plot to kidnap the Lindberg baby in the room of a Boston hotel. Four, perhaps five men, are named conspirators.

The information was given to Baron Kurt von Tippelskirch, German consul at Boston. It was of such a serious nature that he immediately dispatched a complete report to the New York consul-general.

Baron von Tippelskirch neither affirmed nor denied the story. He pleaded he could not even discuss the matter. He said:

"You must understand my position. I cannot comment about these reports. The subject is of such seriousness, I could not, in my position, say anything at all."

The reported visit to the consul here was said to have taken place at the German consulate in State street Two men, allegedly residents of Boston, were with the baron for more than an hour, it was said.

Because the deepest veil of secrecy is thrown over the matter, no definite explanation of it can be made at this time.

The consulate is unable to disclose what happened for diplomatic reasons. The Department of Justice, which was called into the case, refuses.

From one source it was said that hind the plot was the motive of revenge, a motice mentioned during the Hauptmann trial. It is not known if Hauptmann's name is mentioned.

This "break" follows on the heels of the discovery that large amounts of Lindbergh money have been passed around this section and detected at the Federal Reserve Bank.

Department of Justice agents' denials that $30 of ransom money had been passed at the airport last Friday were followed by a statement from American Airlines office in New York that this money has actually been detected and was being traced by the federal forces.

Everett police will brush up on their knowledge of criminal law by attending a school, to be held weekly at Everett police headquarters under the direction of Assistant District Attorney Edward Viola of Middlesex County.

LEGION Demands OATH

He recommended that all legion commanders support the legislation to compel teachers to take an oath of allegiance to the United States.

Bar From Ballots

The Communist party's candidates for office should be barred from all election ballots also, Commander Lavers stated.

Representatives of the Spanish War Veterans, the Knights of Columbus and other patriotic, fraternal and civic groups were present. The meeting was presided over by State Commander Jeremiah J. Twomey.

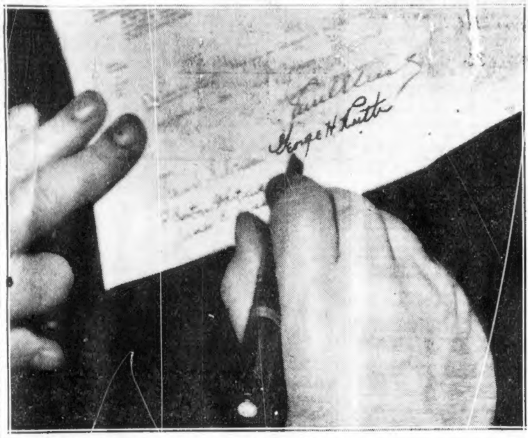
One professed Communist was given the floor. The speaker said he was a Dorchester high school and Boston University graduate and that he was unwilling to fight any "commercial wars" unless his very doorstep were threatened.

In some manner a number of yellow paper circulars were placed in circulation at the meeting. They boldly invited the Legionnaires' attention to the "benefits" of Communism. They were ordered destroyed.

Vote Support

Commander Twomey suggested to the gathering that patriotic exercises, probably in the form of a mass meeting, be held on Boston Common May 1 to counteract the Red May Day activities. The suggestion was cheered and taken under consideration.

Representatives of all the organizations present vited to back the Legion to the limit in its drive against subversive activities.



RIGHT ON THE DOTTED LINE—The Babe's good right hand may be more accustomed to wielding a hickory bat, but he doesn't do so badly with a pen, either. Surgeons Discover New Remedy for Embolism

By International News Service

Vienna, March 1—A surgical discovery of greatest importance was reported at a recent meeting of the Society of Physicians of Vienna by Professors Dr. Wolfgang Denk and Dr. Franz Kazda.

In 14 cases among 20, they saved the lives of patients with embolism, which is a clogging of the arteries, followed by the stoppage of the blood circulation.

The usual treatment in such cases is internal, by means of physics, which, however, have seldom been satisfactory.

Professors Denk and Kazda decided to operate on their patients by baring the clogged vessels and removing coagulated blood. In most cases, normal blood circulation was immediately restored and the limbs, already white and death-like, became again warm and movable.

The professors declared that the success of this surgical treatment of embolism was so encouraging that they will now proceed to fight apoplexy in the same way. In apoplexy of the brain, they are going to open the skull and clean out the clogged cerebral vessel, where patient's heart is strong enough to survive.

Seventy-five out of 100 hitherto hopeless cases may be saved, the professors believe.

WOMAN Near Death IN BUS CRASH

Mrs. Bessie Shapiro, 47, of 482 Norfolk street, Dorchester, was on the danger list in Westerly, R. I., hospital today with injuries received in a bus crash there.

A Boston bound bus skidded into a Connecticut state highway truck in Pawcatuck, Ct., and eight persons, besides Mrs. Shapiro, were injured.

The bus continued on toe Boston under its own power, stopping off in Westerly long enough to obtain treatment for the less seriously injured passengers, and to take Mrs. Shapiro to the hospital.

Died today in New York hospital.

from his wife, herself ill in their Brookline home, until it was necessary to break the news of his death.

Last night Colonel Swan's condition was bulletined as "satisfactory," but early today he suffered a relapse and failed to rally.

For years, Colonel Swan had been connected with the First Corps of Cadets, and when that organization was changed into the 101st Engineers in the spring of 1917, he went overseas as a captain, commanding Company D.

He held this command until September, 1918, when he was invalided home, just before the YD moved into the lines for the St. Mihiel drive.

He was advanced to major and then to colonel after returning to this country and was active in organization of the Crosscup-Pishon Post of the American Legion, an advertising and newspapermen's post.

He also was a past president of the Advertising Club of Boston and was president of the American Legion 1930 Convention Corporation.

Colonel and Mrs. Swan lived at 1808 Beacon street, Brookline. They had no children.

Colonel Swan was born July 11, 1879 in Franklin, Maine, son of Eugene Judson Swan and Estelle Lucinda Boston Swan.

He entered Harvard in 1897 and was graduated in 1901, becoming a track star during his college years.

Because of the death of Colonel Swan, the Advertising Club of Boston today cancelled the forum scheduled at the Hotel Statler tonight, as well as its next Tuesday luncheon.

"City Editors' Day," which was to have been observed next Tuesday, will probably take place later, it was said.

SERUM RACED To Dying Doctor

Brockton, March 1 (AP)—Serum carried from Brockton to the Massachusetts Tuberculosis Sanitarium in Lakeville last night in a wild drive over ice-strewn roads raised hopes of physicians fighting today to save the life of Dr. Raphael Joseph of the sanitarium staff.

Dr. Joseph was stricken with pneumonia several days ago and yesterday physicians found spinal meningitis had developed. Two policemen, in a cruising car, raced the 16 miles in 20 minutes with the serum.

NUISANCE Tax Repeal SOUGHT

By Universal Service

Washington, March 1—A bill to repeal 24 federal nuisance taxes and enact instead a 3 per cent manufacturers' sales tax will be introduced today by Representative McLeod (R.) of Michigan.

McLeod estimates the bill will produce at least ten millions more revenue than the 390 million dollars yielded by the hodge-podge of existing taxes on automobiles, radios, refrigerators, amusements, gasoline and other items.

Meanwhile sharing of personal income tax revenues by the federal government and the states, to lessen the conflicts of double taxation, was under consideration by the second interstate assembly.

A NEW DEAL DREAM DIES

No Cows, No Pigs

MRS. ROOSEVELT SEES REEDSVILLE IDEALS FALL

By FRANK C. WALDROP
Washington Herald Staff Correspondent

Reedsville, W. Va., March 1—The subsistence homestead here was the dream ideal of the New Deal. Mrs. Roosevelt conceived it.

Hardy mountaineers and their families—"who never had a chance"—were not to slave away their lives in the coal mines forever.

The government would build homes for them. When times were dull at the mines they would repair to their ivy-clung cottages. They would raise fruits and vegetables, certainly enough to subsist upon.

They were to get five acres of farm land and good houses—all for $2500 per family.

So far, the cost of the first 50 houses erected here has averaged nearly $5000 per family.

They were to get good barns, for $250 apiece, and a cow and a pig, free.

The barns have cost better than $500 each. So far they are untenanted by cow or pig either.

The project began in the fall of 1933.

Thus far, 49 mountaineer workmen and their families have been settled here.

Bewildered and disheartened, they assert they will not pay the price of admitted waste, inefficiency and experiment which have marked the project from its inception.

They have declined to sign their tenant's contract with the government or to pay any assessments whatever.

More Taxes

In fact, officials of the homesteads division admit that they will have to assess the homesteaders for some "reasonable" amount, now set at $3000, to be paid back over a 30-year period at 3½ per cent, and charge the rest off "to the good old taxpayer."

But the solicitor general of the PWA has ruled that the law calls for repayment in full of the money invested in homesteading.

So, that problem has just been set aside for the future.

The experiment was launched in September, 1933.

The Society of Friends, which had been doing relief and missionary work among the destitute miners of West Virginia, took Mrs. Roosevelt and Louis McH. Howe, the President's No. 1 secretary and confidential advisor, on a tour of the stricken coal mine district.

Public works funds in the sum of 25 millions had been set aside for the establishment of subsistence homestead projects over the country. These would enable industrial workers to farm a part of the year and work in factories when the opportunity offered.

Technicians had begun a study of such projects already operating in Europe.

But the First Lady and Mr. Howe could not wait. M. L. Wilson, now Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, was made head of the homesteads division and he appointed Bushrod Grimes to move into Reedsville and start a project going at once.

Mr. Howe saw to it that the housing side should not lag.

With the result that the E. F. Hodgson Company, of Boston, delivered 50 of their pre-fabricated camp houses at Reedsville for $48,600, freight included.

Met All Tests

These houses, made of red cedar, celotex, and a heavy fibre paper, are scattered from the equator to Labrador and stand up under all kinds of weather tests, according to their buildeers.

Mr. Eric Gugler, the architect who designed the new White House executive offices, soon put them to a new test when he took charge at Reedsville as designer and consulting architect.

All 50 houses were set up, and as promptly knocked down. The Hodgson Company claims that two men can put up a house in a day and a half.

They sent one of their workmen down to Reedsville to help in the rush. He left in disgust and said that as many as 30 men had been put to work on one house and that Mr. Gugler drew so many plans a truck was necessary to haul the plans away to Washington when Gugler left the project.

Gugler, after a frenzy of doing over, in which one house was torn down 20 times, was succeeded by O. B. Smart, who was sent out by PWA to clean up.

Three separate foundations were built for one house. It was finally made to fit one one of them.

A concrete bridge across a stream was rebuilt and relocated three times. The water supply system was fine, until they discovered they had built it too close to the sanitary system, which drained into it. Homesteaders divide their time between counting up the cost and bailing water out of their cellars.

Rescuers Fail to Find Airplane in Jungle

By Associated Press

Livingstone, Northern Rhodesia, March 1.—After a day and a half of surveys through the wilds, searchers reported today that they had found no trace of Lady Margaret Young, wife of the Governor of Northern Rhodesia missing on an airplane flight.

They had braved a wilderness inhabited mainly by lions, rhinoceroses and other predatory animals but had discovered only one native who reported having seen the airplane.

With Lady Margaret was Dr. A. Kirby, government physician, who was accompanying her on the 300-mile flight to Usaka, where Major Sir Hubert Young, her husband, awaited her.

Lady Margaret was in the convalescent stages of an attack of influenza. And had just left a hospital.

SAYS SON OF TY COBB BEAT HER

Work on Cambridge Dog Track Rushed

Promoters of dog racing in Cambridge today were rushing to complete plans for their first season in the university suburb.

George C. Funk, Brookline architect and treasurer of the Bay State Greyhound Racing Association, today told a representative of the Boston Evening American that a building permit would be sought within the next 48 hours.

Only minor technical changes in the track plans prevented him from seeking the permit at Cambridge City Hall today, it was indicated.

Meanwhile, the dispute over the dog tracks raged on, despite the fact that the future policies of the racing commission were clarified yesterday by its new chairman, Thomas F. Cassidy.

It was generally believed that the strength of the opposition in South Boston, Cambridge, Methuen and Dighton, the protesting communities, would be actually registered next Tuesday.

At that time, the public hearing is scheduled at the State House various amendments to the racing law, before the legal affairs committee.

Some of the proposed amendments affect the method of distributing the state's share of profits from dog and horse race tracks.

To Limit Profits

Others limit the profits of promoters. Still others, notably one by Representative Eugene H. Giroux of Somerville, aim at requiring public hearings on both granting and revocation of licenses.

Speaker of the House Leverett Saltonstall, however, has so far refused to let the Giroux bill be brought out of the House rules committee. Unless that is done, the measure is not open for discussion Tuesday.

This measure not only would allow appeal to the governor and council from a ruling of the racing commission, but would require approval of municipal authorities for track sites in their districts.

Asks 'Last' Heart Balm

A breach of promise action, possibly the last such suit to be filed before passage of a New York bill making heart balm illegal, has just been brought by this former Follies girl, Miss Adelaide Gloria, against Francis X. Vote Called in AUTO INDUSTRY

Detroit, March 1—Francis J. Dillon, American Federation of Labor organizer, announced today that a strike vote has been called for among members of 176 locals in the motorcar industry.

The vote, he said, would be in protest against the procedure of the National Automobile Labor Board, which has been holding collective bargaining elections in the industry.

ALYCE HAS NEW ATTACK, OPERATION IS RUSHED

ALARM FELT; SURGERY SET FOR MONDAY

By PEGGY DOYLE

Fall River, March 1—Weakened by a new attack, smiling Alyce Jane McHenry, the 10-year-old upside-down stomach sufferer, will be operated on at 10 o'clock Monday morning.

Newly alarmed over the child's condition, Dr. Philemon E. Truesdale announced the hour for the surgery after examining Alyce Jane this morning.

He found her weakened and exhausted from the intestinal obstruction attack during which she suffered excrutiating pain for an hour and a half last night. He immediately set forward his plans for the operation yesterday, scheduled for Wednesday.

Transfusion Talk

A test of the child's blood was made and she may be strengthened by a transfusion immediately before or after the operation.

"She was not so well, but still smiling," reported the surgeon head of the Truesdale Hospital, who has specialized in operations of this nature.

"The attack was so alarming I have decided to speed up the operation plans. It alarmed me terribly."

While it definitely sapped Alyce Jane's strength—and she was not sitting up today as she has been—the attack was not quite so severe as some the little Omaha girl suffered during the past 12 days before her diet was corrected and while Dr. Truesdale's return from a West Indies voyage was awaited.

This opinion was given by Dr. George C. King, in charge of her medical care and feeding.

That Dr. Truesdale was upset, however, was apparent from his activities immediately after his visit to Alyce this morning.

Rush Consultation

He rushed to Boston where it is understood, he will consult with several of his colleagues in the field of surgery and provide for special instruments that may be necessary during the operation.

A group of the foremost surgeons in New England is expected to witness the operation that, it is hoped, will restore Alyce Jone's "insides" to their proper places and correct a condition that might result fatally at any hour.

These will not only witness the surgery, but will be invited by Dr. Truesdale to advance any suggestions they may have in mind and actually aid.

Detective Bares 'Prince Mike's' Love Suit Plot

By Associated Press

New York, March 1—During the three weeks he "shadowed" Mrs. Wilma E. Gould, a private detective testified in supreme court today, he never saw her with any man except Harry Gerguson, the bogus "Prince" Michael Romanoff, erstwhile pants-presser.

Gerguson, named by Mrs. Gould as the "villain" employed by her husband and several others to compromise her so they might obtain evidence on which to base a divorce action, was not present during cross-examination of the detective, Frank Luderowski.

Leon M. Prince, defense attorney, attempted to break Luderowski's story that "Prince Mike" had been hired to drug Mrs. Gould and take her into his apartment in order that a raiding party might witness a compromising situation.

Prince asked the witness if he remembered having been told by Gerard Luisi, one of the defendants and head of a detective agency which employed Luderowski, that records in the Gould case had been stolen by agents for another sleuthing concern for which Luderowski also worked.

The witness replied that so far as he could recall, Luisi had not told him this.

Over vehement objections by defense counsel, there was introduced in evidence an affidavit signed by Elwood W. Kemp, Jr., attorney for Mrs. Gould's husband, Edward B. Gould, Seneca Falls manufacturer, a defendant in the $500,000 damage suit.

Chicago, March 1 (AP)—Involuntary bankruptcy proceedings were on file in federal court today against the William T. Joyce Company of which Stanley Joyce, former husband of Peggy Hopkins Joyce, is an executive.

Attorneys for the estate of John H. Humbird of Spokane filed the petition alleging the company, which controls huge areas of timberland, owes it $475,000, and that its liabilities exceed $530,000.

'BREAK' Near in Riel CASE

POLICE LEAVE ON SECRET TRIP

Worcester, March 1—A "break" within 48 hours in the search for Etta Riel was promised today by State Detective Edward J. McCarthy.

"We have secret information that will lead us to a break in the case shortly," he told a Boston Evening American reporter.

Shortly after making the statement, McCarthy, with Captain Michael J. Barrett and Lieutenant Edward J. Sherlock, left the city by automobile, declining to state their destination.

McCarthy's announcement came after police had decided to search for her body, in the belief that she had been slain, along the Webster-Putnam highway.

Decision to make this search came today after a truck driver recalled that on the morning of November 22, the day Miss Riel dropped from sight, he had seen a man and girl quarreling in an automobile.

The driver told state detectives that he was driving out of Webster toward Putnam, Ct., and nearly hit a parked car as he rounded a curve. The car was without lights, he said.

According to the trucker, he pulled up to chide the driver and saw in the car a man and a girl. The girl was crying and, as the truck driver started to address the car driver, the latter stepped out of the machine with a revolver in his hand.

The truckman said he thought discretion to be the better part of valor and he drove off.

The calls were from a man and a woman.

Members of the missing girl's family were questioned and convinced the authorities that they did not make any mysterious calls.

Investigators said this means that at least one man and woman knew the girl's plan to leave the city and may know considerably more about her disappearance.

SCHOOLS Here Need 30 MILLION

Washington, March 1 — More than 30 million dollars is needed at once for the construction of school buildings in Massachusetts, officials of the Bureau of Education of the Interior Department said today.

Basing their estimates on the results of a partial survey, the officials reported that $31,727,729 should be spent immediately on the construction of 168 projects in the Bay State.

A total of 168 building projects for Massachusetts alone was urged by the bureau.

These projects include 119 in cities with populations of more than 2500 and the remaining 49 in rural sections.

The 30 million dollars, it was pointed out, would enable an expenditure of $28,926,729 in urban projects and $2,800,000 in rural schools.

Thin Ice? It Needn't Mean Tragedy!

JAMES FOX JACOB GRAFF

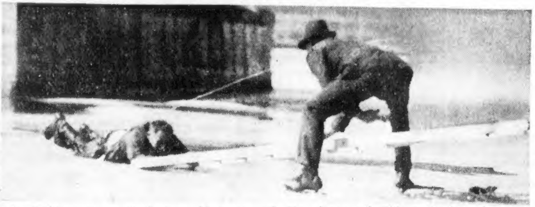
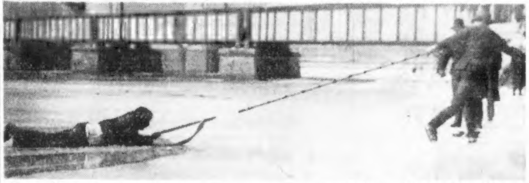
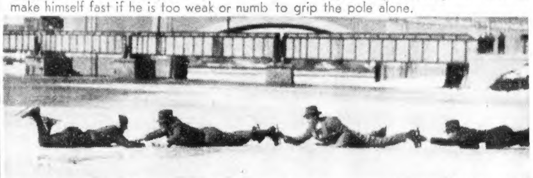
What if you fell through ice into deep water? What if you saw someone else in the same predicament? The Massachusetts Committee to Further Outdoor Recreation gives you the answer. Jacob Graff, L street brownie, and James Fox, in skating toque, are volunteer "victims" in a Charles River demonstration.



The ladder rescue. A plank would do as well. Or a fence rail. This method can be used by a single person. It is particularly useful when thin ice surrounding victim is treacherous.



The pole rescue. A strap or rope is attached to the pole's tip, allowing the victim to make himself fast if he is too weak or numb to grip the pole alone.



The human chain. The man on the outer end must chance a ducking, but ice which will not hold a person standing will often support him lying flat.

NEW CUT In Cambridge LIGHT RATE

Already boasting the lowest electric light rate of any New England city of more than 100,000 population and one of the 10 lowest in the United States, the Cambridge Electric Light Co. today announced new reductions.

Co-operating with Governor Curley in his campaign for lower utility rates, Harding N. Greene, general manager of the Cambridge firm, announced that new rate schedules would be filed with the State Public Utilities Commission to become effective April 1, if approved.

Cambridge's residential light rate at present is five cents per kilowatt hour for the first 75 hours and 2¼ cents the kilowatt hour thereafter.

PUBLIC APATHY MAY FOLD UP NRA

LIKENED TO PROHIBITION

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

Washington, March 1—The Roosevelt government faced by the prospect that NRA, like prohibition, may fold up because of public non-compliance with it.

All the recent conspicuous court decisions have been adverse to NRA.

In Congress, a rebellion against it is growing.

NRA is now the object of two possible Senatorial inquiries. When it was rushed through under the lash of President Roosevelt's popularity, it was able to acquire a margin of only seven votes in the Senate. Since then, opposition to it may have strengthened.

The latest court decisions attack NRA as unconstitutional.

In several cases against it yet pending, a new policy of attack may be adopted by its opponents. They are preparing to assert that the administrators of NRA have been inexperienced and incompetent, that their decisions in code matters have been arbitrary and capricious and that they have caused irreparable damage to vested rights in property.

These cases will assail the alleged bureaucracy of NRA.

They will claim that both employers and employed have been damaged in their rights by the arbitrary decisions of youthful bureaucrats who have refused to allow both parties to code controversies to submit statements of their cases.

They will get back to the early and impetuous beginning of NRA and the Blue Eagle when General Huge Johnson was quoted as declaring, defiantly:

"I make the law."

In the oil case, already decided by the supreme court, the code was held to be unconstitutional because it was legislated by bureaucrats rather than by Congress, which has the only legislative power.

The fear now entertained by the experienced and serious-minded advisers of the President is that the latest court decisions, whatever their merit or lack of it, may convince the country that NRA is dead or dying and that future public compliance with it is unnecessary.

They expect thae the public may not catch up with the fact that out of 130 NRA cases already decided in the lower courts of the land, all but a half-dozen have been favorable.

MILK FACTS

As of February 24, 1935 the Massachusetts Milk Control Board issued the following order:

"The following practices are considered unfair and shall not *be engaged in bv Distributors or by their officers, employees, and agents;- Any method or device whereby milk is sold * * * at a price less than stated in the schedule * * * "*

A schedule containing increased retail and wholesale prices fixed by other dealers was attached, and the whole delivered to us by mail.

There has been a recent increase of ½c per quart in the price which dealers pay to farmers for milk, but the retail price which consumers must now pay has been increased one full cent which adds ½c to the present dealer profit.

We believe the consumer should pay no more than whatever increase the farmer gets for his milk; but we are compelled by the above order of the Milk Board to increase our price to 12c. We shall adhere to this price as long as this price schedule on milk, at wholesale and at retail, is enforced by the Milk Board in the Greater Boston area.

NORRIS PLAN FOR ONE HOUSE GAINS

Other States in Line

Two years from now the State of Nebraska will begin to operate a new kind of legislature, the "unicameral," with a membership limited to 50 legislators. The measure proposing the plan was passed by a popular vote in the last election. It was fathered by United States Senator George W. Norris. An outline of the plan and the movement for its extension follows:

Omaha, March 1—Last November the people of Nebraska took the advice of United States Senator George W. Norris, veteran progressive leader, and voted to transform their 80-year-old, bi-partisan, two-house Legislature of 133 members into a one-house, non-partisan body of not more than 50.

When they did that they set in motion a new political movement that promised to sweep the midwest like a praire fire.

Although the first unicameral legislature in Nebraska will not convene until January, 1937, measures like the one adopted by Nebraska have been introduced in the legislatures of four states. The governor of one state has asked the legislature to give the Norris plan careful study and in seven other states the tide of public opinion is veering strongly toward the plan.

Support Grows

The unicameral legislature may not be approved this year, nor two years from now, in any of these states, but public sentiment is crystallizing in support of the plan, which simplifies state government and the task of making laws. As was the case in Nebraska, politicians in other states don't approve of the Norris plan. They object to its nonpartisan feature, which, they say, will weaken party organization.

Their most effective argument is a plea for delay. They ask the people to wait until Nebraska has tried the plan, and promise to support it if it proves successful. But Senator Norris has a large following in states other than his own. It is possible that in spite of politicians' opposition, the people in one or more states will be given an opportunity to follow Nebraska at least by 1936.

The demand for simplification of government, including consolidation of counties, is growing in the midwest. The Norris plan is one factor in this program or simplification.

Business men are among the plan's strongest supporters, and, like the people of the midwest in general, have accepted political innovations in the past much more readily than the people of older and more conservative sections of the country.

In Missouri

The first state in which it was proposed to submit to the people a constitutional amendment providing for a plan like Nebraska's was Missouri, although Missouri is generally regarded as one of the more conservative of the midwest states. Similar measures have been introduced in the Legislatures of Kansas, South Dakota and Wyoming, and may be sponsored in the Legislatures of Iowa, Minnesota, North Dakota, Colorado and Oklahoma before those bodies adjourn.

State Senator E. H. Benson, advocating the plan in Kansas, has hopes of success in the present session. His measure would submit the plan to the electorate in the 1936 fall elections.

Farther east, in Ohio, the National Farm Council is sponsoring the unicameral bill soon to be introduced in the state legislature.

At the present time, Kansas and South Dakota seem the most likely states in which the proposal may be submitted to the people at the next general election. In Wyoming and Missouri, legislative sentiment is reported so antagonistic the measure may fail in bot' states.

However, in those states havin the initiative and referendum, the legislatures refuse to subm the plan to the electorate in 193 It is more than probable that o ganizations and persons intereste in adoption of the unicameral sys tem will initiate the proposal, a was done in Nebraska.

Tots to Decide 'Swap' Suit

(Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer)

Edmund Walter Emerson Walter, Jr. Frank

Whether or not Walter W. Emerson gets custody of his three children, Walter, Jr., Edmund, and Frank, in Los Angeles' notorious "wife-swap" divorce suit depends upon what Walter, Jr., 11, told Judge Ben B. Lindsey in a private conversation. Emerson charged his wife with indiscretions with Barton Sewell. Mrs. Emerson in a cross suit charged similar acts against Emerson with Mrs. Sewell, but the latter was exonerated in court.

SON HOLDS FATE IN WIFE SWAP

'Spell' Bared in Suit

By Universal Service

Los Angeles, March 1—Superior Judge Ben B. Lindsey has under submission the hotly-contested "wife trade" divorce suit of Walter W. Emerson, actor-writer, against his socially prominent wife, Mrs. Jane Scholtz Emerson.

Charges that Mrs. Emerson has been "acting under a spell" since she met the millionaire yachtsman, Barton Sewell, were made in court as the trial drew to a close.

Attorney M. M. Cohen, representing Emerson, hurled the charge in his final arguments in which he asked that the actor be granted a decree and custody of his three children.

Talks With Boy

Earlier in the day Judge Lindsey had conversed in his chambers with the oldest Emerson boy, Walter Jr., 11, and he stated that upon the statements of the youth he would largely base his custody order. He refused to divulge what took place behind the locked doors of his chambers.

Judge Lindsey also granted "complete exoneration" to Mrs. Leah Clampitt Sewell, wife of the yachtsman, who was named as correspondent in Mrs. Emerson's cross complaint for divorce.

The action was taken at the request of Mrs. Sewell's attorneys who pointed out to the court that no evidence of misconduct on the part of Mrs. Sewell in the alleged "wife exchange" incident had been introduced into the hearing.

Occupied Room

Mrs. Emerson had testified that upon last November 3 at a beach cottage she occupied a bedroom with Sewell while Mrs. Sewell and her husband occupied another bedroom.

Testimony of principals had been that Mrs. Emerson occupied the same bed with Sewell on the night in question and that Mrs. Sewell slept on a daybed in an adjoining room with Emerson.

Emerson, Mrs. Sewell testified, was asleep when she lay down and still was asleep when she awoke the next morning.

Cohen branded Sewell, the correspondent in Emerson's suit, as a man who had "been dishonest with everyone connected with the case, even to his best friend."

Concerning the alleged "wife exchange" incident, Judge Lindsey said in striking Mrs. Sewell's name from the case:

"She was guilty of grave indiscretion, but from all the testimony in the case I am not convinced she was guilty of misconduct such as the law defines."

Cohen told the court:

"This whole thing is saturated with black filth. Sewell testified from this witness stand that he was serious in his love-making to Mrs. Emerson.

"Mrs. Emerson is not a bad girl. She is not a bad mother. But she has been acting under a spell since her return from Alaska on the millionaire's yacht."

Mrs. Emerson's attorney, W. I. Gilbert, accused Emerson of connivance in the relations which existed between Mrs. Emerson and Sewell. Referring to Mrs. Emerson, he said:

"Her condition has been the problem of the ages. The desire of a woman for a man, and vice versa, comes unbidden and leaves when it leaves."

B. & M. SHOPS To Remain Open

Repair shops of the Boston & Maine railroad at Billerica, where approximately 500 men are employed, will remain open this month, the company announced today.

A 21-day program has been planned. Shops at Keene and Concord, N. H., and Portland, Me., will also operate during the month.

TORSO SOUGHT In Legs Mystery

London, March 1 (AP)—Scotland Yard today discarded the hoax theory regarding the human legs found last week in a train in Waterloo station, deciding they had a murder mystery to solve.

Detectives were assigned to search London areas in the belief that the torso of the man's body from which the legs were chopped may be hidden there.

PLANE ON WAY To Get Prisoner

he first police plane ever to come to Boston for a prisoner was winging its way here today from Nassau county, Long Island, New York.

Patrick Hennesey, 20, was arrested in Lynn last night for Nassau county police on a larceny charge. When New York officials were told Hennessy had waived extradition, Lieutenant Harry King took off at Long Island and is to fly the prisoner back home.

DRIVE Short Million NEAR DEADLINE

Still short of the $3,000,000 mark, the Emergency Campaign of 1935 has only today and tomorrow left in which to obtain the $4,000,000 for which it is driving. The total reached today was $2,865,382.90.

A check for $10,000 representing a down payment by the federal employes who have pledged more than three times that amount was a cheerful indication that Greater Boston agencies will not go unsupported.

IRELAND Starts Big Water PROJECT

By International News Service

Dublin, March 1—Five and one-half million dollars will be spent on further water and electrical development in the Free State, under proposals of the Electricity Supply Board and the Dublin Corporation.

Within the next month a contract will be signed with a French firm for a $500,000 project to improve the water storage capacity of the Shannon by controlling water levels in Lough Allen, County Leitrim.

Work will begin at once. Preliminary surveys are being made.

R. F. Browne, chairman of the Electricity Supply Board, said the aim is to treble the outflow from Lough Allen by excavating a channel at the entrance to the lake. This would involve dredging about 255,000 cubic yards of earth and 35,000 cubic yards of rock.

Existing sluices, originally built for navigation, will be replaced by lower ones at the outlet from the lake. This entails reconstruction of three bridges.

The improvement was rendered necessary by increased demands for power, expected to increase by 10 per cent every two years.

This scheme is the first development to be undertaken under the electricity supply amendment bill, which provides for expending $3,115,000.

SENATOR'S FALL Postpones Quiz

Washington, March 1 (AP)—A fall downstairs by Senator Clark (D., Mo.) caused postponement today of the plans of the Senate munitions committee to hear William B. Shearer answer previous testimony that he had threatened death and scandal to officials of shipbuilding companies in a disagreement over pay for big navy propaganda.

Clark, a member of the committee, planned to question Shearer and had studied the case in advance.

It was explained that a new pair of slippers he was wearing proved unmanageable on stairs in his home and he fell.

Capt. Berry Retires

Captain Osmyn C. Berry, 70, former port warden of Boston, and then inspector of hulls for the United States inspection service in Portland, Me., retired from active service.

'PINK SLIP' Fight Opened by BOSTON GROUP

Protests to senators and representatives in Congress as well as to the Secretary of the Treasury against the "pink slip," required with income tax returns, were urged today by Alexander Lincoln of Boston.

Lincoln heads an organization known as the "Sentinels of the Republic." The Sentinels are opposed to the "outrageous invasion of rights to privacy" caused by a provision of the new tax law which requires individuals to file for publication certain facts relative to their income taxes.

His organization previously opposed the child labor amendment and the proposal for a federal bureau of education.

PRACTICAL RESULTS -- By Hendrik Van Loon

Napoleon has had quite a boom these last few weeks.

He is one of the hardy perennials of history, like Julius Caesar and Alexander, but just now he is well ahead of his rivals.

We find two almost simultaneous publications of the letters he wrote to his first wife, whom he married because he loved her, and the second one, whom he married because it was good politics.

This is very pleasant and flattering for the Napoleon family (and there are still quite a number of them left, for those Italian families have never believed in birth control).

But it is not quite so pleasant and flattering when we think of the small amount of progress we have made since the days when the historians declared that history should not be merely a long enumeration of battles and murders, but should show development of the average man, should be a record of things of which we have reason to be proud, rather than a chronicle of legitimate crime.

THE PREFERRED HERO

Apparently the great majority of the people still prefer the hero on horseback to the hero of the laboratory or the workshop.

* * *

Today if you want to read a history of the Napoleonic era, the librarian will give you 10 or 12 or 15 volumes.

Somewhere in volume nine or 10, you may find a foot-note which tells you that early in the winter of the year 1810, just before Napoleon married Marie Louise, whose father's empire he had destroyed, a child was born to a certain French exile in Poland by the name of Chopin and to his wife, Justine Krzyzanovdska, and was duly baptized and given the name of Frederic.

ANGLE OF HISTORY

If I had it within my power to rewrite all history I would write 10 volumes about Frederic Chopin and would add somewhere in a foot-note in Vol. 1 that when young Frederic saw the light of day, Europe was being turned into one vast shambles by the insatiable ambition of an ill-bred little person inscribed in the baptismal records as Napoleone Buonaparte.

For whereas Chopin added vastly to the happiness of tens of millions of people, Napoleon, except for those of his immediate relatives and friends whom he enriched with the crass profligacy of a racketeer who has struck it rich, gave us nothing lasting but a rather dull sort of furniture and an excellent sort of pastry.

* * *

I have not infrequently mentioned this point in lectures and magazine articles.

And invariably there has been some disciple of the Ford school of history ("all that old stuff is the bunk!") who interviewed me rather contemptuously about the "practical results" of Napoleon's labors as compared to those of poor Frederic Chopin, who died of consumption at the age of 39.

The one had founded empires and the other had just written a lot of music, and that was all.

Granted. But not a single one of the empires, kingdoms, duchies and principalities of Napoleon remains, whereas Chopin was the founder of a modern state which seems to be doing very well and which is known as the Polish Republic.

Chopin's waltzes and polonaises and mazurkas could not be locked up in the dark dungeons of the Warsaw citadel. Neither could they be hanged nor shot nor starved into submission.

They freely crossed boundaries that no human being could hope to pass. And they did what the great Napoleon had never been able to do—they gave birth to a new and independent Polish nation.

By and, large, therefore, one Chopin seems a better investment than a dozen Napoleons.

Bruises on Statler Heiress Deepen Death Mystery

By Associated Press

Pinehurst, N. C., March 1—A coroner's jury turned today to a physician's test tubes and microscope to help it explain the strange death of Mrs. H. Bradley Davidson, heiress to the Statler Hotel millions.

The 22-year-old former Olympic swimmer, married only two months ago to H. Bradley Davidson, 41, Washington socialite, was found dying behind the wheel of her automobile, in the family garage, three days ago.

An autopsy, incomplete as yet, confirmed the statement of Dr. M. W. Marr that the immediate cause of the young woman's death was carbon monoxide, but further examinations were ordered.

Dr. C. C. Carpenter of the Wake Forest medical faculty, who assisted Dr. Marr in performing the autopsy, told the coroner's jury:

"The only condition found capable of producing death was carbon monoxide poisoning, but certain chemical analyses and microscopic examinations will be required before the autopsy is complete."

Although he did not indicate what, if any, significance they might have, Dr. Carpenter also reported finding a dozen minute abrasions, not more than 48 hours old, on the heiress' right hip and thigh.

While waiting for the complete autopsy report, which may not be available until Monday, the coroner's jury was ready to continue hearing witnesses.

Mrs. E. M. Statler of Buffalo, foster-mother of the young bride, was expected here today. It was understood she would be accompanied by several executives of the Statler enterprises.

Mrs. Davideon's death left only one of the Statlers' four adopted children. Marion Statler died before reaching 25, a victim of pneumonia. Death at an early age also overtook Milton O. Statler, killed with his wife in an automobile accident a year ago.

Ellsworth M. Statler, 22, the only survivor among the four who were brought up under the guidance of psychologists and experts in child training, lives in England.

LOSES PURSE With $500 in Gems

Police today were on the trail of a brown leather purse containing $500 worth of jewelry and $12 cash. Mrs. Alberta M. Doherty of Grove Hill avenue, Newtonville, reported the purse lost or stolen.

Mrs. Doherty told police she rode to the Huntington street subway station last night and then went to a Back Bay hotel. When she reached the hotel, she said, her purse was gone.

NIRA Attack Before SUPREME COURT

By International News Service

Washington, March 1—A bitter attack on constitutionality of the NIRA was laid before the Supreme Court today in a brief filed in the appeal of the Spielman Motor Sales Co. of New York.

The case, which involves the most sweeping test of the recovery act yet presented to the court, is slated for early argument.

The motor car company appealed from an unsuccessful attempt to enjoin District Attorney William C. Dodge of New York from threatened enforcement of the "Shackno Act," which makes violations of NRA codes a violation of New York law.

The company was alleged to have violated the discount and tradein provisions of the NRA motor vehicle retailing code.

The brief drawn by S. Frederick Placer of New York said:

"To sustain the validity of the NIRA necessitates the overthrow of all of the doctrines with respect to interstate commerce which have guided the government since the inception of the republic."

He charged the NRA has caused a decline in industrial production in the United tSates.

SHOE CODE May Provide 30-HOUR WEEK

By Associated Press

Washington, March 1—Father Francis J. Haas of the NRA Labor Advisory Board said today the board would insist its proposed amendments to the Boot and Shoe Code be included in the code when it is reopened next month.

The labor advisory board has demanded amendments to provide equal representation of labor on the code authority, three standards of minimum wages for unskilled, semi-skilled and skilled workers; a 30 hour week and elimination of all population and sex differentials.

Father Hass said the board also would insist on complete compliance with labor provisions.

The NRA ordered the code reopened yesterday to consider an amendment to permit non-members of the National Boot and Shoe Manufacturers' Association to serve on the code authority.

TEXTILE Strikers Return

La Grange, La., March 1 (AP)—Casson Callaway, president of the Callaway chain of textile mills, at whose six plants here some workers struck yesterday and today, said in a statement today that 80 per cent of the operatives had come back to work and "all mills are running."

Maple Sugar Heads Odd Menu

By Associated Press

Burlington, Vt., March 1—Maple sugar on snow, doughnuts, pickles and coffee.

That will be the menu in 200 Vermont communities tonight as Vermonters gather at maple sugar festivals in all sections of the state.

The idea is that of the Vermont Farm Bureau, and besides the odd menu there will be maple sugar cake contests, the ultimate winner of which will bake one and take it to President Roosevelt at the farm bureau's expense.

The biggest festival was expected to take place in Burlington with a probable attendance of 1000 persons. There is plenty of snow and sugar on hand, but a dent in the doughnut supply was expected to result from a score of doughnut eating contests.

BOY KILLED as Truck Hits Sled

Brockton, March 1 — Richard Young, six, of Clifton avenue, was killed today when his sled collided with a truck at Market street and Warren avenue.

Percy Segar, driver of the truck, called a police ambulance but the boy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Young, was dead upon his arrival at the hospital.

By Associated Press

Monte Carlo, March 1—Edward Robson, an Englishman, had established something of a tradition today for amazing good fortune in last minute whirls of the roulette wheel.

A year ago Robson gave the wheel a final play just before he left to catch his train for London. He won 400,000 francs.

As train time approached today, the Englishman, without funds, borrowed a small sum from a friend. His number came up three times running.

CITY LAW Force "Inadequate"

Denial that the city law department is undermanned was made today by Corporation Counsel Henry E. Foley, replying to a charge last night by City Councillor Robert Gardiner Wilson.

Wilson asserted that the municipal court docket is choked with cases against the city, with but one attorney assigned to care for the great mass of business.

According to Corporation Counsel Foley, the law department has been handicapped because of illness among the staff.

TIRED FROM SHOPPING?.. get a Lift with a Camel!

MOST WOMEN AGREE that there's nothing more fatiguing and long-drawn-out than the task of being the family purchasing agent.

"A long morning spent in a crowded store is a dreadfully tiring job for any woman," says Mrs. Van Brunt Timpson. "I have found a good way to make it more pleasant. When I begin to feel a little tired, I slip away for a Camel.

"Somehow, smoking a Camel makes me feel livelier—the job less tedious! My spirits revive. Tiredness leaves me. I can continue shopping with more energy. Camels are so wonderfully mild that I smoke quite a lot. They never affect my nerves."

BARBARA STEVENS

If the lands of balmy breezes offer too long a vacation from home, a few days in New York seems to refresh and revive jaded interests. So many socialites, like Mrs. Charles Francis Adams, are not getting any farther than Gotham in their search for something different . . .

Bayard Warren has already been in the South for the greater part of the winter, so it is probably just his keen interest in horses that has taken him to Santa Anita, in California, for the racing season . . . Social sportsmen are indicating a steadily increasing interest in these races, and there will be names of the first families of most of the country's largest cities on the guest book of the clubhouse . . . Vanderbilts and Whitneys are among those whom Mr. Warren will greet at the track . . .

Lectures Planned

BOSTONIANS VACATIONING in Nassau next week will have a glimpse of royalty . . . the royal honeymooners, the Duke and Duchess of Kent, will arrive there on the 6th to indulge in their favorite sport, fishing . . . An official government reception and a number of informal affairs have already been planned to give their highnesses a taste of social life in the island colonies . . .

A select group of those who remain in town during the late winter season have marked their calendars for March 7 and Saturday, March 23, the dates of the next two lectures of the Alliance Francaise . . . Rev. Englebert Devincq will be heard at the first of the two, and Professor Andre Morize, a great favorite of French students, will address the members on March 23 . . .

If a non-member wandered into this exclusive gathering of society he would think he was in Paris . . . conversations and addresses are carried on in French . . . and even Mrs. Russell Codman's introductory remarks are in the foreign tongue . . .

Members of the Junior League Glee Club went into a huddle yesterday afternoon to have a lesson on ragtime and jazz . . . not content with listening to the illustrations of the various stages in the development of jazz from the earlier forms of ragtime as played by four of Ruby Newman's star players, they stood on their chairs, or in the aisles, and sat on the window sills to watch the performance . . .

Ruby's manner belied his statement that he found himself being overtaken by a mild case of stage fright as he found himself standing before an audience to lecture instead of to wave his baton.

Mrs. Stearns Poor Among Listeners

A WRITER OF MUSIC and coach of many Junior League musical performances, Mrs. Stearns Poor was one of the most intent listeners . . .

Mrs. John Yerxa and Mrs. David Cheever, Jr., had front seats so they wouldn't miss a note and Eleanor Gibson, who knows good music when she hears it, tapped her feet in rhythm with the musicians as they illustrated points of Mr. Newman's explanation of the importance of each instrument in developing syncopation . . .

Joe Emery and Jane Megrew enjoyed the harmonies from their seats by the entrance, being frequently interrupted by busy Junior Leaguers dashing in to inquire about some phase of their work in the League office.

One of the newest members of the League's songsters, Barbara Stevens, learned a few pointers on jazz from the pianist himself after the lecture . . . Dorothy Cornish was another who recognized [illegible] the musicians, as she is one of note herself.

Mrs. Oliver S. Leland and Mrs. [illegible] W. [illegible] decided they would like to learn how [illegible] the flutter tongue or slap tongue methods of the [illegible] more primitive forms so they could surprise Jazz Bo Brown should he ever pay a visit to the Junior League . . .

English Speaking Union Entertains

WHILE THE JUNIOR LEAGUE was enjoying its music the English Speaking Union was being transported to Arabia by the lecture of Bertram Thomas, explorer and expert on Arabic languages . . .

Mrs. Charles A. Shea

Charlotte Allen and Louisa Beals played hostesses for the gathering at the Union's headquarters in one of Commonwealth avenue's famous old houses . . . Polly Binney presided at the tea table to dispense refreshments during the reception which followed the address . . .

To tea or not to tea was the problem of many of the guests . . . Mrs. Charles Bacon, Mrs. Malcolm Bradley French and Mrs. Charles Shea decided not to spoil their appetite for dinner and hurried away after brief greetings with Mr. Frederick Whiteside, Dr. John Bartol, Mrs. Stephen Weld and Mr. Frederick Worlock, one of the cast of "Dodsworth" . . .

Mrs. Harold Jefferson Coolidge, Jr., was slated for pouring honors but found Polly Binney doing such a good job that she devoted her attention to passing cakes and holding brief conversations with the many guests . . .

This Is Life

ROBERT E. ROGERS

This Friday I shall spend in the warm glow of contentment and gratitude I always experience after filling out my state income tax blank. Comparative gratitude, that is.

On March 15, after filling out the Federal income tax blank, I shall [illegible] a nervous wreck. There is no [illegible] use anyone's telling me that if I would only make out both of them together I could combine my feelings and let them cancel out the contentment and the jitters.

Robert E. Rogers

But me, I'm not that way. I have never yet been known to get my blanks in before the last possible moment. Once in a while they have been in behind the least possible moment, and there has ensued lengthy and belated correspondence followed by penalties.

What I mean is merely this. To a simple citizen who has no complications of business income, partnerships, accrual bases and such who merely draws his wages and an occasional fee without benefit of a Certified Public Accountant, although I have one in the family, he has never saved me any money yet—the state income tax blank is a great comfort and relief.

Disadvantages

Its flat rate of one and a half per cent is devised exactly for people like myself. It is very chary of allowing deductions which are also a nuisance because you have to look them up with great travail and then are chagrined to find how infinitesimal they are.

Of course, it has its disadvantages. It is lousy mean, for instance in the one point which is the great benefit of the Federal tax—the quarterly payment system.

Nay more, its fifty per cent prepayment aggravates the inconveniences of payment for men of moderate incomes received in regular installments. It seems very strange that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts cannot arrange its financial affairs so that it can get along on quarterly payments.

But all that is forgotten once I cast a despairing eye on the intricacies of the first page of the federal tax return, with that irritating double-column affair at the bottom of the page which, so far as I can see, simply calls for your doing the same arithmetical work twice—the second time backwards—thus turning the affair into an arithmetic test in which you check your own work, as if the government experts were not competent to check it for you—and how!

Those Pink Slips

Not to mention the constant annoyance of forgetting till the last moment that you have to swear to the thing before a notary public and rush around trying to find one before the mails close.

But all these nuisances fade into insignificance before the iniquity of the pink slip.

No better instrument was ever calculated to help not the government, but all the spies, informers, business rivals, advertising sucker lists, neighbors and plain ordinary private snoopers.

It is the modern equivalent of the infamous Lion's Mouth in the Doges' Palace of the Republic of Venice in those high and far-off times of tyranny and espionage.

It was tried once and dropped. I predict that this time it will not survive. It nullifies the whole principle of a decent tax return.

Both informed supporters and critics of the administration cannot avoid a disheartening disappointment in the persistence with which the President perversely pursues notoriously ineffective, and extravagant if not obstructive measures.

All around us are nations which have substantially recovered [illegible] depression adopted pro[illegible] which they escaped [illegible] which have [illegible] civilization.

"RAW" PLAY Puzzles Everett

Is "Camille" a play which may be given with propriety in the Everett High School hall?

This is the question puzzling Everett officials today.

The adventures of Camille are, to quote one official, [illegible] the rawest of the raw, and he [illegible] to step into the picture [illegible] City Council unless some other agency steps in and halts proceedings.

Meet the boys and girls!

In today's "About Faces" drawing all of you Boston Evening American readers must turn to the Metropolitan Theater where the screen offers "Living On Velvet" featuring three of today's Hollywood stars. Would you like to be one of the possessors of a costly Keystone movie camera? Here's all you have to do:

Fill in the squares beneath the drawings of your favorite stage, screen and radio stars, as they are portrayed daily in the "About Faces" series, with their proper identifications. TEACHERS REPEL RADICAL ATTACK

PLEDGE AID TO DEMOCRACY

By Universal Service

Atlantic City, N. J., March 1—Rebuking a radical group which had demanded freedom in the teaching of new social doctrines, the department of superintendency of the National Education Association pledged its allegiance "to the American form of democratic government."

A resolution unanimously adopted declared it is this form of government "which acts for and with the people to realize that great [illegible] of human betterment toward which America strives."

The resolution also committed [illegible] to a program stressing the use of intelligence rather [illegible] and force in making [illegible] social and economic changes as are needed for the improvement of American life.

The resolution further asserted that the nation's schools should be made an effective agency for the realization of America's "democratic goal."

[illegible] rebuke to the left wing group was threefold, culminating [illegible] by the department [illegible] president A. J. Stoddard [illegible] superintendent of schools [illegible] Providence. R. I. Stoddard declared:

"Certainly we want the schools of America to be able to tell boys and girls the facts in connection with the problems of society as far as it is humanly possible to determine these problems.

"We want the teachers protected in the presentation of those facts.

"But I don't believe any educator directly connected with learning on the part of children should be allowed to deliberately indoctrinate those children in accordance with his own peculiar opinions of some subject."

Earlier the committee on resolutions had refused to submit any endorsement of the claim that academic freedom carries with it the right to indoctrinate pupils under the guise of education.

Another setback for the radicals came when they tried to amend the report of the resolutions committee.

AUSTEN LAKE on

Joe Cronin Is One Of the Boys

Sarasota, Fla., March 1.

YOUNG MR. JOE CRONIN, the exchange professor from Washington, is pretty difficult to distinguish with the naked eye from his collecton of Red Sox hired men.

Austen Lake

Where we ball authors are accustomed to seeing a manager pacing around as if he were wading through mud in a pair of hip boots, with a 10-ton heft of care wrinkling his forehead, young Mr. Joe is usually buried up to his tonsils in the mob scene

In stead of standing apart, like a church warden, with his cow-catcher chin propped in his palms and squinting narrowly at the scene, he is in the thick of various forms of fat man's folly, like the stomach-bends or riding an imaginary bicycle while upside down, or jogging gently at the head of his herd.

This is partly because young Mr. Joe is candid enough not to pretend the ponderous character of a wizard with a gift of second sight. And partly because he is not dealing with athletes of early mental age and half-grown bodies, as was the case with the Quinn-owned Red Sox.

But mainly because he realizes that his muscle-schooling stage is a simple, boresome process of getting his men and himself physically hard, with no fake or frills.

* * *

IN HIS BRIEF MEETING with his men in the hen-coop which serves for a locker room, he laid down no curfew laws, prescribed no prohibitions and only asked that they keep reasonably fit.

If the boys wanted to wander out to evening operas, or tarry for a triple-decker ham-Swiss on rye with smearings of mayonnaise at the corner drug store before going to bed, why O. K. by him.

And he said simply that he did not want any bunions or hoof-chafings around the park, and if the boys did not have cozy-fitting shoes it was their own fault and might be held accountable. (Ed. note—John Merena promptly scuffed up a toe infection.)

And he added that he would not ask any details of professional intelligence from his men that he was incapable of himself, and hinted that he would not rebuke dashing initiative or hurt the pride of his lads by attending to all the mental chores from his post of command.

* * *

IT IS ODD, TOO, to see the baseball clown, Al Schact, without his dusty waiter's coat and battered silk hat doing straight-face, serious work, instead of blowing kisses to the crowd or shrilling his finger whistle.

There was not enough hump to the pitcher's mound and Al supervised the Negro crew in sloping it to greater height.

In right field, where the fence had been moved back, the sandy, sugar-soil of Florida had been exposed and made it dangerous for running. So he mustered a squad of rakemen and a steam roller.

There is none of the eccentric foolishness and slapstick nonsense for which Boston crowds have known Schact during past visitations with the Senators.

He told me today that he planned no comic capers before his home audiences at Fenway this year, "except, maybe, a little on Sundays and holidays."

Al never displayed his goofy pranks in Washington as coach of the Senators. He saved them for the road.

* * *

THE 22 PLAYERS now rendering down their winter's lard are two-thirds of the Red Sox 1935 muster. But in measure of importance and hope, these represent more than three-quarters of the club's strength.

This is on the basis that pitching is 75 per cent of a team's power, potence and puissance.

Wes Ferrell, Lefty Grove, Rube Walberg, Dusty Rhodes, Henry Johnson and George Pipgras are six seasoned campaigners—the half dozen who are known as the "Ifs" or the "Questionable Quorum."

The junior intermediates of the staff are Johnny Welch, Fred Ostermueller, John Merena and George Hockett, lads who stand now between seed and harvest.

The last named is the boy who last year told Bucky Harris dolefully, "I haven't a whispering hope of making this club," and then, late in the season, shut out the Yankees and Athletics very stylishly.

The neophyte freshmen are big, spindling and spare burly Joe Mulligan, dark and brooding Byron Humphries, Hilary Zummer, chunky and cheerful Roger Hanlon.

* * *

A LONG AND SINISTER SCAR, purple as grape stain, traces down the right elbow of George Pipgras' arm, where for the second time surgeons pared and probed the joint for calified bone-chips, large and jagged as mice teeth.

Experience most dreaded to pitchers is "elbow lice," as the fragments in the arm process are called. It comes from jerky arm motion, throwing when overtired, or from bones lacking the right chemical elements.

In any case once a pitcher submits his elbow to the knife, he is usually blighted, whether because of the mental hazard or weakened sinews.

In the long and pitiful list of such victims I have only known two men to recover their old power, old Jack Quinn and Urban Faber.

* * *

WHEN EDDIE COLLINS manages to put enough salary salt on "Moose" Salters' tail and the big outfielder reports to camp, Cronin has a course of training ready to cure him of weakness on ground balls.

"Nothing makes an outfielder look more ridiculous than having a ball bounce between his legs," said Cronin.

I agree. Nothing was more comically tragic than the sight of Solters' pannicky figure turning to chase a ball that had gone through his croquet-wicket legs, and lumbering after it like a grizly bear after a wild rabbit.

Cronin is going to give "Moose' a dose of infield practice, standing him on the edge of the infield grass and peppering grass skippers at his shins. Daily lessons, 15 minutes each for a month, is Joe's prescription.

BERGER at THIRD

JOE MOWRY ON SECOND

By Joe Cashman

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 1—The ides of March present the strange spectacle of Wally Berger at third and Joe Mowry at second when the Braves hold infield practice.

It's not a joke, either It's a deliberate attempt on the part of the resourceful Mr. McKechnie to strengthen the club with which his days are numbered.

He has seven fly chasers, all young and able-bodied except Ruth. On the other hand he can safely count on only [illegible] Mallon, Whitney and Urbanski for infield duty

Every law of nature and average insists that Mar[illegible] won't play much despite his [illegible]ance to the contrary. Nobody knows whether Joe C[illegible]raret can make the grade And E[illegible] Fl[illegible] still lacks experience

So, in an effort to be ready for any emergency, Boss Bill has ordered Mowry to stick around second throughout training and he's letting Berger see plenty of action at third

EX-INFIELDER

He has no idea, of course, of converting walloping Wally, the best center fielder in the league, into an infielder.

In fact the Tribal pitchers would probably strike in a body if they had to work without Berger between Ruth in left and Randy Moore in right.

It would be only as a last resort if the Tribal slugger were moved in.

Wally, incidentally, is as dazzling at third as in the outfield, which perhaps isn't surprising since he was a classy shortstop before he became a gardener. He'd hold his own if he ever has to change jobs

Milt Gaston, former Red Sox right-handed ace, is seeking a trial with the Braves

"Better hire Omar the tent maker," advised "Packey" McPartland after getting Babe Ruth's uniform measurements.

Joe Coscararet and Tommy Thompson have reported. Jordan, Mallon, Whitney and Lee are due today

REELING ON AS BABE COMES HOME TO BOSTON

Always a favorite with the youngsters, Babe Ruth is surrounded by Boston American newsboys on arrival at Back Bay station.

A brief reception at the Back Bay station follows Babe [illegible]. Commissioner McSweeney of the Boston police heads the group.

It's all very well for Babe to broadcast [illegible] but [illegible] more Mrs. Ruth takes part in [illegible]tory [illegible].

Even a good-natured gentleman like Babe Ru[illegible] being photographed. So he borrows a camera, and turns [illegible] pals, the newspaper picture hawks. As a photographer, Babe proves a great outfielder.

BROADCAST IS TRIUMPH FOR AMERICAN

BIG MOMENT OF CAREER, HE SAYS

Epoch making history, startling in its sensationalism and daring, breathtaking in its possibilities and portents, was the manner of Babe Ruth's thrilling homecoming radio message to Boston.

Through the courage and resourcefulness of the Boston Evening American and the superb and complete co-operation of the National Broadcasting System and the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, a feat unparalleled in sporting annals was achieved, one signalizing a new and colorful era in broadcasting.

Hundreds of thousands of radio listeners with their ears glued to the receivers in homes, clubs and offices in Boston and New England heard the Babe's deep, husky voice as it went booming forth into the mysterious void of the ether

While they listened with rapt attention over Stations WBZ and WBZA of the National Broadcasting Chain of New England, the Babe himself, his wife, Jack Conway, sports editor of the Boston Evening American; Newcomb Thompson, American radio editor whose untiring efforts assured the success of the venture; John McNamara, program director of the N. B. C. stations; Judge Emil Fuchs, president of the Braves, and prominent [illegible] dio and [illegible] fortably [illegible]nced in deep cushioned chairs in a special radio car hooked on the New Haven's crack Yankee Clipper.

Tortured iron wheels groaned out accompanying music. The Yankee Clipper, luxurious in its appointments cracked off each succeeding mile between Providence and Boston at ever increasing tempo

PERFECTION

Never before [illegible] sports [illegible] so [illegible] On [illegible] few rare occasions and then [illegible] for persons of the greatest importance has [illegible] duplicated

"I thought I had tasted all the thrills of life," stated Ruth after his broadcast and again at the Copley Plaza reception

"But they all paled by comparison with the greatest thrill I ever received, broadcasting from a speeding train, with the arrangements perfected with studio thoroughness"

Listeners [illegible] well nigh perfect

SCORE ONE

[illegible] sensational [illegible]

As early as last October the Boston Evening American first told its readers that the Babe was headed for a managerial berth with the Braves. Yesterday the American again scored one of the great beats of newspaper history [illegible] Babe Ruth [illegible] Braves base[illegible] history, is but one more milestone in the career of a great newspaper.

Babe Hailed

WILD GREETING ON ARRIVAL IN TOWN

By Walter Kiley

A few fleeting but memorable hours marked Babe Ruth's return home to Boston.

Today the 40-year-old veteran and his wife are back in New York. A hectic last minute [illegible] with daughter Jean, shove off for the Braves' training camp at St. Petersburg on Sunday.

Boston's reception to the "Sultan" was tremendous. It left little doubt that [illegible] his affectionate spot [illegible] of local fandom.

Bu[illegible] importance is [illegible] brief visit here [illegible] Babe's managerial [illegible] osed the exact [illegible] Ruth and one William M[illegible] as far as future [illegible] club are concerned. [illegible] Braves [illegible] F Adams, vice-president and a principal stockholder brought out the main [illegible] befuddled the [illegible] and public alike.

The Copley-Plaza testimonial to Ruth, attended by more than 200 leaders in political, sports and general walks of life disclosed the following salient fact

1 Ruth will hie himself to St. Petersburg [illegible] ant to Manager McKechnie. He will do what he is [illegible] anywhere he is ordered with the exception of the sun field, where [illegible] may happen to be in the varying [illegible] and in general support him [illegible] manner [illegible] conducive to adding [illegible] improvements to the Tribal treasury

2—The Babe can—and will—take over the Braves management next year and the year after, the present season serving as a novitiate in which he will get his National League upbringing and further equip himself with the effective tools to successful management of a major league ball club

3—McKechnie will be in compete charge during the 1935 season at the end of which time he will be promoted to [illegible] position as personal representative, official spokesman and unqualified and official proxy for Adams in the Braves organization

C. F.'S SHADOW

"Babe can be manager in 1936 and 1937" the Judge said at the Copley Plaza.

Adams [illegible] carefully prepared typewritten statement [illegible] at once a [illegible] warning to Ruth [illegible] which lie ahead of [illegible] future managerial capacity. He said:

"I certainly hope that the 'Babe' realizes his ambition and that he will merit the position he has so much desired. He has much to learn in the next few months and to succeed he must gain the confidence of the public, press and owners of the Boston club

"He must learn to be a good soldier, if he is not one already. He must by his own example create loyalty and respect within and without the club

"How about Bill McKechnie. That there may be no misunderstanding, he, too if the 'Babe' can successfully fill his shoes, will be promoted

I have tried to be a silent partner in the Braves' organization. That I may continue to fill the same role and that I can feel that my investment, if any, and that of my associate, Bruce Wetmore, is in the best of hands. William McKechnie, if he so elects, will become my personal representative, speak and act for me in the Braves' organization and have my unqualified proxy to carry on whatever official responsibilities and authority I properly should shoulder

"My happiness will be assured if the Babe, the 'Rabbit' and Bill can carry on the burden of the Braves the rest of their active lives and keep them where they belong in the baseball world."

ROCKNE To Be Honored MONDAY

SERVICES ALL OVER COUNTRY

By Associated Press

Kansas City, March 1 (AP)—Notre Dame's immortal "Rock" will be honored by loyal sons scattered from coast to coast on the birth anniversary of the great coach next Monday, March 4.

Young Billy Rockne will place a wreath on the monument marking the spot in the Flint hills of Kansas, near Cottonwood Falls, where Knute Rockne and seven others plummeted to death with a crippled air-liner on the gloomy morning of March 31, 1931.

Accompanying Billy will be an alumni group including Larry Mullins, the last Rockne fullback and now athletic director of St. Benedict's College, where Billy is a student and Dr. D. M. (Mike) Nigro of Kansas City, friend of Rockne, who fathered the plan to hold nationwide memorial banquets on Rockne's birthday, starting this year.

Alumni groups all over the country responded to Nigro's suggest. In a sheaf of letters endorsing the idea are signatures of father John F. O'Hara, president of Notre Dame; Elmer Layden, one of the immortal "Four Horsemen," now the head coach at South Bend; Tom Lieb, athletic director of Loyola, New Orleans, and the rank and file of Notre Dame Alumni.

WILL BABE PLAY UNDER MOON?

He Won't Like It

By Joe Cashman

St. Peternburg, Fla., March 1—The managements of the Cincinnati Reds, St. Louis Cards, Chicago Cubs and other National League clubs that intend to play night home games this season are doing plenty of pondering about our Braves at the moment.

They're visualizing a golden harvest if they can show Babe Ruth and Rabbit Maranville playing under lights, but they haven't the slightest idea whether they'll be able to cash in.

In the first place there's no guarantee that either the Rabbit or Babe will do much playing. Secondly, if they do perform regularly, nobody knows whether they'll agree to perform under the arcs.

Neither colorful veteran has ever been a baseball moonshiner, and after wooing the sun for more than 20 years neither has any desire for a new object of affection.

LEWIS KNOWS

Being courageous, reckless souls both are likely to try being nighthawks once. But if they don't find the artificial nights to their liking you can bet there will be no second time for them.

They're not going to bring their brilliant careers to a close being carried out of a synthetic game on a stretcher.

The rest of the Tribe will have no choice in the matter. If they did, not one who has ever played at night would do so again. They say the scheme is the worst punishment ever inflicted on a ball player.

Listen to "Buddy" Lewis, who recalls his night experiences catching for Rochester last season most vividly.

"It isn't night ball," complains Bill; "it's a nightmare.

"I think the catcher is the worst sufferer, but everybody takes plenty of punishment.

"The ball looks as small as a pea and is almost impossible to follow. A catcher trying to receive a wild pitcher is taking his life in his own hands. So is a batter facing a speed king.

"It's a miracle if a player goes through the season without being injured.

"And the system of playing one day in the afternoon and the next in the evening adds to the player's woes.

"I caught one night in Rochester until a few minutes before 3 a. m. I had to be out to the park before noon the next day for a double-header.

RUINS 'EM

"Regular eating or sleeping is impossible. There's a constant danger of the night's dampness bringing on a heavy cold or worse.

"No player can hope to last very long under those conditions."

If Ruth and Maranville find three faults with the moonlight melees, the magnates may as well stop dreaming those golden dreams. The stars will never shine on the Tribe's glamorous pair.

The Big Monkey Returns

By Jack Conway

EDDIE COLLINS made Babe Ruth grin from ear to ear when he pulled the language of the ball player on him during the reception to the King of Swat at the Copley-Plaza.

"I'll be rooting for the 'Big Monkey' to get a hit every time he comes to bat other than when he plays the Red Sox in the World Series," said Collins.

Mr. Boston

Ball players have called the Babe the "Big Monkey" for years. It has been a moniker of affection.

Collins told of jumping in the air and giving vent to his enthusiasm when Ruth won the big inter-league game at Chicago with a home run.

Eddie was a coach on the American League team, and for once he said he was rooting for the Babe to bust one.

Ruth has always been popular with the players, and at heart Eddie Collins is still one of the [illegible]

SAME OLD BABE

I MET Ruth at Providence and was with him until he left for New York on the midnight.

He is a bit older, but at heart he is still the golden-hearted boy with whom I traveled when he pitched, played the outfield and also starred for the Red Sox 15 years ago.

"Remember that home run I busted against the Giants at Tampa back in the Spring of 1919?" the Babe inquired.

"The game was played on an old race track," I told Mrs. Ruth, who was in the party.

"Benny Kauff was in center field for the Giants and he played a deep field. Yet Ruth cleared Kauff's head with a hit by a mile. John McGraw told me it was the longest home run he had ever seen hit."

"I never hit a ball so far before or since," said the Babe.

Ruth was intensely interested in the Boston Evening American radio broadcast over WBZ.

A special car with the broadcasting outfit was attached to the crack "Yankee Clipper" of the New Haven road at Providence.

The train left the station before Mayor James Dunne of Providence was able to get off, and it was necessary to stop the train. The trip to Boston was then resumed.

"How can we broadcast now that the train has started?" queried the Babe.

"That's the stunt," replied Newcomb Thompson, radio editor of the Boston Evening American. "We are going to broadcast from a moving train. It is the first time in history an athlete has ever given a broadcast under such conditions."

Babe was thrilled by the radio broadcast. He was perfectly at home when he gave his first greetings to New England fans over the Boston Evening American radio hook-up.

* * *

GLAD TO RETURN

AFTER the broadcast, Ruth chatted with me about Boston.

"I am thinking of the last game I played in Boston last season," he said.

"You had a picture in the Boston Evening American in which I was waving a farewell to the fans. And now I am coming back to Boston, and I am going to play for the Braves. It's great."

The train arrived in the Back Bay station, and Ruth was greeted like a conquering hero.

Police Commissioner Eugene M McSweeney was on the job to direct the large police detail which was at the station. Everything was conducted in an orderly manner.

Later at the Copley-Plaza Hotel, Ruth was tendered a reception.

In his talk, he mentioned the Boston Evening American broadcast which he said gave him the greatest thrill of the many he has had since he agreed to play with the Braves.

* * *

BABE AS PILOT

THE Ruth story then busted wide open.

Babe will be a player and an assistant to Bill McKechnie this season, as well as one of the vice-presidents of the club. In 1936 and in 1937 he will be manager of the club.

Charles F. Adams once more proved he is a splendid sportsman when he announced that in the event Ruth becomes manager of the Braves in 1936 Bill McKechnie will be his personal representative with the club.

McKechnie will represent Adams in all matters in connection with the Braves.

This means McKechnie will remain in the Braves picture in an important executive position, while the Babe will carry on as manager. With, of course, the "Rabbit" on the job as one of his "right eyes."

Then we drank a few more toasts to the Babe and called it a day.

IN MAT GO AT GARDEN

By Jack Conway

Dan O'Mahoney, Irish heavyweight wrestling champion, will meet another severe mat test tonight when he clashes with Gino Garibaldi, Italian heavyweight, in a finish bout, best two falls out of three, at the Garden.

O'Mahoney has won 14 straight bouts since he came to this country. His tremendous strength, terrific attack and dazzling "Irish Whip" have enabled him to pin his mat rivals.

[illegible] lides with the rugged Garibaldi

Garden Card

MAIN EVENT

Dan O'Mahoney, Ireland, vs. Gini Garabaldi, Italy.

SEMI-FINAL

Nick Lutze, California, vs. George Zaharas, New York.

PRELIMINARIES

Len Macaluso, Colgate, vs. Bob Russell, Newport.

Dick Shikat, Germany, vs. Charlie Strack, Oklahoma.

Rudy Dusek, Omaha, vs. Leo Numa, Washington.

Scotty McDougal, New York, vs. Sun Jennings, Oklahoma.

Jim Austeri, Italy, vs. John Spellman, Brown University.

(First bout at 8:15. Main event at 10 p. m.)

The latter is an experienced wrestler with exceptional speed and a knowledge of a varied assortment of holds.

In addition the Italian heavyweight is a star with the flying tackle. He copied this destructive weapon of attack from Gus Sonnenberg.

The old Dynamiter is his only superior in the use of the tackle in wrestling rings.

GEORGE NEXT

Garibaldi first came to the front among heavyweight wrestlers two years ago. He gained needed experience in bouts with most of the stars.

Gino has packed on weight, and has also improved in wrestling. He recently scored a quick victory over Ernie Dusek at the Garden.

If Garibaldi wins from O'Mahoney, he will demand a title contest with Ed Don George.

Garibaldi believes O'Mahoney will not stand the fast pace he will set tonight.

Garibaldi is the greatest Italian wrestler to come to the front since the palmy days of George Calza.

I saw O'Mahoney win from Len Macaluso at Worcester on Tuesday night. Danno showed in this contest he has mastered a body scissors. This hold will give fine support to his "Irish Whip."

LUTZE ON CARD

Paul Bowser says another huge crowd will jam the Garden tonight. O'Mahoney is today the hottest sports attraction in this country.

The preliminary card stands out as one of the finest of the year with Nick Lutze clashing with George Zaharas in the semifinal.

Love Denied

By Louise Long and Ethel Doherty

Shock for Sharlene

CHAPTER 41

"Obstacles! He kicked the cushion out of his way again.

"He couldn't rest until he'd made her love him more than the baby, till she left the baby and husband for him. Then he didn't care any more—he'd won!"

"But, he married her—" Sharlene began.

"He owed her that; he should have done it years ago when her husband finally got a divorce."

"But, Leigh, don't you see how sporting it was for him to marry her—when he did?"

"Sporting!" Leigh snorted. "He didn't think he was taking any chance. The doctor told him she was going to die. That's why I couldn't get him to phone you about it—before he did it. He thought his usual good luck would hold and nobody would ever know it. Even when she got better, he thought it would come out all right."

"Then you did the unexpected, running off and getting married. He'd counted on your sticking through anything."

"And I failed," Sharlene said unhappily. "I've never forgiven myself—"

"Don't be silly! You gave him a new hurdle, don't you see? You were going to be hard to get. That was what he was looking forward to—"

"While he was being so good to Cora?"

"Good? Well, if you like to put it that way. He dragged her around with him to save talk. There'd been enough of that. He saw her as little as possible. In the Islands he devoted himself to sports. He had a grand time; he always has a grand time. That boy has a great zest for living—as long as there's something he can't have, just ahead" . . .

"House of Cards"

There was a long silence. Sharlene lay back in her chair looking rather pale. "Leigh," she said at last, "you've just shattered a cherished illusion."

"What do you mean?" He halted to look at her [illegible] exasperation. "Have I been talking out of turn—about Cora?"

"No. It's just—I'd always pictured Kent as being—oh, very tender and wonderful to Cora."

"Huh? But you know Kent's not like that. Now, is he?"

"Well, really—it's hard for me to separate my conception of Kent from Kent as he is, I guess—"

"Sure. You thought of him as doing what you'd do under the circumstances—but Kent's a he-man, Sharlene. He's got a lot of grand points but being tender isn't one of them. And get the idea out of your head that you've got to make up to him for anything you did. I can't go that. Makes me think too much of Cora, poor thing."

Sharlene had been stacking the papers on her desk. They fell over and scattered again all over the place. Leigh helped to pick them up.

"Like the well-known house of cards, Leigh," she was trying to smile, "collapsing all about me."

He looked up at her sharply from where he was kneeling on the floor. "I haven't worried you have I, Sharlene? You must know Kent as well as I do by now. Unless you prefer to pretend."

"Yes, I know him pretty well," she said slowly, unwillingly.

"Don't ever think that your place as his wife can be assailed, my dear. You're secure. You're his family—like me or his mother. But what I mean is you've got to face the idea of his chasing off after some new game any minute. And wasting money on it, too, like this De Vore deal. Just one of the things we've got to reckon with."

"I see," Sharlene got up slowly and smiled dimly at him. "There comes a time, I suppose, in every wife's life when she no longer looks on her husband as a hero. Well—I'd better dress for dinner. Kent will soon be home."

Leigh watched her drift away to her bedroom and bit his lip savagely. Maybe he'd said too much. But . . . he had not told her that one of the bills he had found that day down at the office was for a five-thousand dollar diamond bracelet engraved "Julie."

Bides Her Time

The flimsy excuse of preparing Miss De Vore to accept a contract with the Demerell Production Company was wearing pretty thin.

They had to carry a huge equipment, a large technical crew to handle it, an expensive troupe of actors. Then came the staggering decision to make it in color, which meant more equipment, more technicians, more difficulties.

Sharlene saw very little of her husband these busy days and heard about the plans only in preoccupied snatches. She had dropped almost entirely out of the old social whirl where once she had spun so gaily, and was extremely busy and interested in reorganizing their menage for economy's sake.

However, she soon found it discouraging to have her painstaking economies more than offset by Kent's lordly expenditures for the picture.

The was costing Kent a lot of money one way and another, [illegible] her costumes for the picture [illegible] being [illegible] Kent [illegible] knew [illegible] eyes to see she was [illegible] never [illegible] from one moment to the next she kept him in a state of more or less pleasurable suspense.

Sharlene was patiently biding her time until Kent should be through with this exciting picture game. She confidently expected him to come back to her like a little boy tired with his toys on a rainy day.

One somber threatening afternoon in November Sharlene rescued some late zinnias from her garden and brought them into the house.

A telegram had come for her but not sensing its import, she delayed opening it until she had arranged the flowers in a long blue bowl. Then she dried her fingers and slit the yellow envelope casually.

"YOUR MOTHER IN AIRPLANE ACCIDENT," she read with mounting horror. "EN ROUTE TO FLORIDA STOP DOCTOR SAYS SHE DIED INSTANTLY STOP CAN YOU COME. "AUNT ROSE."

A great wave of blackness engulfed Sharlene. She fell back into a chair and lay there numbly. She could think of only one thing. She must get Kent.

He would know what to do. But she couldn't get out of her chair. Katie came in after a while and found her there.

"Katie, phone the studio. Tell Mr. Damerell to come home." Her voice failed. Mutely she held out the telegram to the girl.

"Mrs. Standring! Oh, ain't that awful, oh, ain't that awful!"

"Hurry, Katie, phone."

Waves of Agony

Katie rushed to do her bidding, sniffling as she [illegible]. She came back wringing her hands.

"He ain't [illegible] office [illegible] say he's [illegible] where [illegible] though."

"Oh, can't they find [illegible]"

"The [illegible] afraid to [illegible] what was [illegible] matter [illegible] said she [illegible]

"Where [illegible] can't wait [illegible] one [illegible] get up and [illegible] Where [illegible] the [illegible] I've got to [illegible] now."

"Shall I go down [illegible] and [illegible] Mr. [illegible]" Katie in tears.

"No. I'll go. I can't wait. I'm suffocating."

"I'll have Morton right away, the car and I'll get your [illegible]."

Katie rushed out of the room, leaving her mistress fighting waves of agony, and came back with a fur coat into which [illegible] [illegible] down [illegible] suffering eyes. She [illegible] telegram [illegible] crushing it unknowingly into the soft palm with cruel [illegible].

The lowering skies brought the winter dark down swiftly as they went into Hollywood. Morton [illegible] expertly against the [illegible] traffic. [illegible] the day had come for the studio when they arrived, and [illegible] were pouring from the [illegible] with [illegible] attending [illegible] of cars and pedestrians.

It was a studio where Kent had rented space and which housed several independent companies. Morton parked the big car outside and they walked past the gateman, to whom Morton explained. It's Mrs. Damerell. Inside the lot they proceeded down narrow streets flanked by sound stages and office buildings.

Kent's secretary, coated and hatted, was just locking the door of his office when they came into the hall.

"Where's Mr. Damerell, Miss Hughes?" Morton asked.

The girl faced around—cagey, on guard, ready to dissemble for her employer. She looked Sharlene over and relented as she saw the white face, the tragic eyes, the telegram clutched so convulsively.

"I'll tell you where he is," she said at last, "if you'll promise not to say I told you. If he asks, say you din't see me—I'd gone home. I've got to keep my job!"

"Yes, yes!" breathed Sharlene.

"Well, he's in Miss De Vore's dressing room. Go out of this building and turn to the right on D street. It's a bungalow sitting in a plot of grass. You can't miss it."

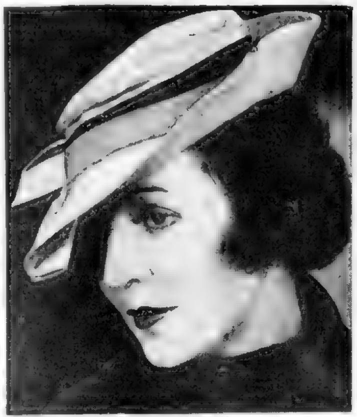
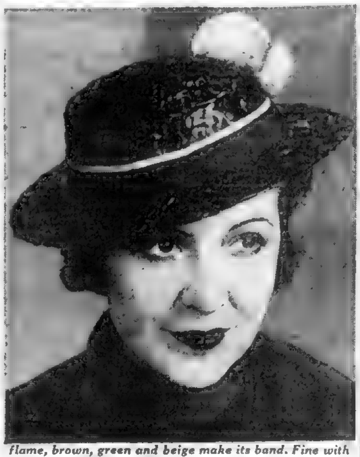
The Important Suit Hat





By Annice Brink

NO LESS of moment than the suit itself is the hat destined to crown the spring ensemble. Hats of the slightly less mad—though no less original—variety are in the best taste, whether the suit is a pastel tweed, or a darker town tailleur, reefer, or what will you. The two hats shown above are chosen as fashion finds because: They suit the two prevailing moods, one sporty, but not country, the other tailored, but not stiffly; they are "originals," and at the same time cost less than four dollars apiece. Crystal green French felt, above, is adeptly pinched and crushed into the "up-in-the-back and 'way-over-the-eyes" fashion. Grosgrain ribbons of flame, brown, green and beige make its band. Fine with tweeds and all sorts of swaggers. Shiny brown roughly woven straw is used in the sailor, above, with chartreuse pompoms and ribbons. It will do your reefer, or short-jacketed tailleur proud. Particularly if you go Gibson Girl all the way and wear an exquisitely tucked and ruffled, fine white muslin lingerie blouse. If you wish for further information on the hats, which are from a Boston shop, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Helen Hayes' Favorite Scent

Spring-Like Lilac Fragrance

By JULIET SHELBY

DELIGHTFULLY consistent is Helen Hayes' personality. Her taste for clothes, books, interiors, plays, people—all seem to dovetail and form a glorious entity. When you look at her, petite thing that she is, you could almost guess that her favorite flower is the lilac and that she prefers the lighter floral essence in perfume and toilet waters.

She resembles a lilac, for she is herself fragrant, fresh and modest. All her stage and screen success has not robbed her of that charming capacity for the genuine that is so becoming to any woman. She has a directness of manner and a sturdiness of grace reminiscent of the flower she adores.

If you are a Helen Hayes type, either in appearance or in mannerisms, then you, too, should wear only the floral fragrances. Make them speak of your personality, have them radiate your individual charm. More and more, floral fragrances are growing in popularity—something to do with the swing back to the feminine in fashion and the saner life we are living these days. These pleasant, refreshing whispers of flowers create a charm that is almost irresistible. Why shouldn't you, too, discover that charm and enjoy flaunting it?

A lovely essence of the lilac and a very authentic one, comes in a toilet water that I can bet you wouldn't discover in a hundred years. "Toilet water?" you say. "I've never used one!" Well, one sniff of this glorious spring-like essence and you will become a devotee! Use it lavishly over your body after a bath, sprayed on your lingerie, your handkerchiefs, in the lining of your hat, on the hems of your gowns.

It is one fragrance that you need not fear—even many dew ladened lilacs are not too heavy with odor, only more compelling. Naturally, it is one of Helen Hayes' favorites, for it is so appropriate to her individuality. You'll like it, I know.

This lilac toilet water which is the favorite of Helen Hayes is sold in Boston stores. To obtain the name of this product, call Miss Shelby, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

SHE FELT MARVELOUS WHEN HABITS BECAME REGULAR

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Relieved Her Constipation*

Read this splendid letter: "I tried everything, with little or no results. I felt miserable, was 20 but looked much older, and my skin was continually breaking out.

"I decided to try ALL-BRAN, three meals a day for about a week. Elimination became regular; I felt marvelous and looked better. Even my outlook on life was changed."—Mrs. Armand Hamel, Pawling, N.Y.

*Constipation due to insufficient "bulk" in meals.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to aid elimination. It also furnishes vitamin B and iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is gentle—and safe for normal individuals. More effective than "bulk" in leafy vegetables, as it does not break down within the body.

Isn't this natural food pleasanter than patent medicines? Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily. Chronic cases, with each meal. If not relieved, see your doctor.

Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Much more effective than part-bran products. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

LILLIAN FEARS ACCUSATION IS ERROR

CHAPTER 281

I SHOT a glance at Hugh and Lillian to see if they also had noted the peculiarity in Samuel Brixton's attire.

But Lillian, having given Brixton her contemptuous dismissal, had turned away without a second glance at him. Hugh? I could not determine. His face was impassive as ever [illegible] to let her pass [illegible].

I knew that he had been intently watching Brixton, to see that [illegible] moment when [illegible] Lillian, but I [illegible] he had followed the [illegible]. Watch eyes and [illegible] no particular attention to any other part of Brixton's body.

If Hugh had noticed the same incongruity in Sam Brixton's costume which I had seen, I was very sure that he would acquaint Lillian with it without delay.

I would wait, therefore, I told myself, before making any comment until I should be assured by his silence that he had [illegible] nothing.

[illegible] did not speak until Hugh had closed the door after her. Then she struck her hands together with a little gesture of [illegible].

"[illegible] I made a colossal [illegible]," she said ruefully. "[illegible] the person whose [illegible] Hugh heard on the balcony [illegible] granted him gratuitously [illegible] putting possible ideas in his head and the famous [illegible]. Don't put [illegible]. But the conviction that he was the man just [illegible] the throat. I'm not so sure now. What do you think, Hugh?"

Hugh waited several seconds before answering.

"It's something that's extremely hard to determine with so little evidence," he said at last, and his tone I realized was decidedly judicial. I wondered if Lillian's patent prejudice might not have made him bend backward."

"All we have to go on in his case are two things. His window is near enough for him to have been able to reach the balcony and go back again and he is spending the night here instead of at The Larches where we all supposed him to be.

"But against those two facts we have the difficulty which a man with so unwieldy a body would experience in getting back into his window from the balcony, and his very plausible story of his wife's headache."

"Sam's body isn't so unwieldy," Lillian said. "He's stout, of course, but he plays a surprisingly good game of tennis, and I've seen him do other stunts impossible to a man who didn't keep himself in pretty fair physical shape."

"But granted all that," Hugh persisted, "we really have very little basis for any suspicion of Brixton. If we had something tangible."

"I think we have," I said quietly.

Both Lillian and Hugh, who had been facing each other, wheeled and stared at me.

"What do you mean?" Lillian demanded.

"Didn't he give you the impression that he had [illegible] from bed?" I asked.

"Yes," [illegible] "But [illegible] looked [illegible]

[illegible]

"You've [illegible] Madge. Sam was on [illegible] trying to find out what [illegible] about what's going to [illegible] on Marion's birthday. What [illegible]?"

Many Fish Recipes for Lent

(From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB)

The arrival of Lent is perfectly timed to market conditions, for the fish supply is plentiful, varied and inexpensive. As a matter of fact, fish prices are cheaper now than they have been for the past five years, while prices [illegible] particularly beef, are soaring.

[illegible] and ready for cooking.

WESTERN SALMON

The best [illegible] buys are [illegible] more delicate in flavor and [illegible]

EGG PRICES DROP

Among the dairy products, butter prices remain the same as they were last week. The price of eggs has dropped a few cents. This will continue as the season advances, for March, April, May and June are the months for heavy egg production.

Fruits and vegetables are of great interest to the housewife for 25c of every dollar is spent in this division of foods. Over the last few years the consumption of this type of foods has increased as we realize their great benefit to the body.

Bananas are selling at 4 pounds for 25c and here the housewife has a marvelous source of food energy as well as vitamin content. Bananas fit into every type of meal that is served in the home, whether it is as bananas and milk, or bananas in combination with desserts—such as banana cake or fruit salad, or as an accompaniment to add appeal to the meat course.

SPINACH STILL HIGH

Spinach is still high in price but to substitute for this important green we have hot house dandelion greens at 25c a peck; crisp, green kale at 35c a peck and new beet greens. Cucumbers which are an ideal accompaniment for fish, are expensive at the present time, selling at around 25c apiece—although here again there are substitutions to make, such as cheese, parsley, egg or caper sauce. Peas and beans are lower in price—peas selling at 15c and beans at 7c to 8c. We have old cabbage selling at 3-4c a pound and cut-off carrots at 3-5c, squash at 3-5c. An interesting news item—the first summer squash is appearing on the market at the very reasonable price of 8c a pound. This comes from Florida. Asparagus is also evident for the first time this year, but is quite expensive. In another month or so the supply will increase and the price will be lower.

ADVICE on LOVE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX and NELL BRINKLEY

Loneliness Is Bad Habit—Can Be Cured

MERELY being alone doesn't make a person lonely. Actual loneliness comes from having a warm heart and believing there is no one to love it.

All lonely people are capable of love. It's this unused love of theirs which is like a constant ache, an unhealed sickness.

The trouble with lonely people is that they imagine the whole world loves and laughs and dances, and that they alone are forlorn, neglected and love-hungry.

They never stop to think that perhaps in the next town, or the next block, or the next house, there's somebody who is saying the very same thing.

The best medicine for lonely people is to stop thinking of their own solitary condition, and to go about trying to make things a little happier and more cheerful for the other fellow.

Take up some cause, study, avocation—something which will put you in contact with your fellow creatures and make you dwell less on your own unhappiness.

Lonely people usually have a morbid streak. They persuade themselves they are unattractive an not deserving of love. Nine times out of ten, this is entirely a wrong belief.

Perhaps they have lost a sweetheart, and hug this loss too closely, making no effort to find another person to love. They deny themselves this very human need. They just wait, quivering, for the next blow of fate.

That's what I mean when I say that loneliness is a bad habit.

All that lonely people need is to understand their own difficulties. Then little by little they must try to be less shy and self-conscious. And they should remember that they are more likely to find a congenial friend or sweetheart among the quiet stayers-at-home than among the lively frequenters of dance halls.

In other words, all that is necessary for lonely people to do is to force their way out of their own unhappy shells and seek each other out.

Hearts need love as much as fish need water or lungs need air. Until you satisfy that need for love and companionship, your life will be a failure.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I pay eight dollars a week for my board and sleep in the attic, which is unfinished and unheated. I have an office job and make $15.00 a week. But my stepmother seems to think I should give her my pay envelope, and my dad backs her up in this. I get breakfast in the morning for the family because my stepmother has three young children, and she says she has to get them washed and dressed for school.

I am engaged to a very nice young man who has a farm about 60 miles from this city, and he wants me to marry him and leave this very unhappy home. But my father and stepmother tell me it's my duty to stay and help them out. I'd stay if either of them was a good sport, but they just whine and fuss all the time and are very rude to my fiance when he comes to see me.

KATE T.

Let's be thankful for the fiance who has a farm where you can go and forget all about your Cinderella troubles. I do not share the opinion of your father and stepmother that it's your duty to remain and contribute your pay envelope to that particular household.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Now that it's all over and my son is really married, I'll admit that I tried to prevent his taking a wife. I had nothing against the girl, but I thought he was a little young to marry. He did marry over my objections, and all three of us are living under the same roof. The house belongs to me, and my son pays the running expenses.

My daughter-in-law is very modern and employed. I should like to have by-gones be by-gones, and now be friendly with this girl, but she insists on calling me Mrs. —— and is very aloof in her relations with me.

MOTHER-IN-LAW.

You can hardly expect the girl to gush over you and treat you as if you were her own mother, when you tried to keep your son from marrying her. But now that you have become reconciled, use all your tact and charm in winning her over. The situation is difficult, I'll admit. But a clever older woman should be able to sail around the rocks successfully.

Country Girl or City Girl? Has Love a Favorite?

NELL BRINKLEY SAYS:

Do you think that the aura that surrounds the city girl—color, the latest clothes, a certain air, acquaintance with smart things—weighs the scales down with Love? That he falls more for that than the sweet simplicity of the small-town girl who has never been in a big city in her life?

I don't. And I don't think the average young man thinks so, either.

Why, half the lovely girls in the CITY came from the COUNTRY!

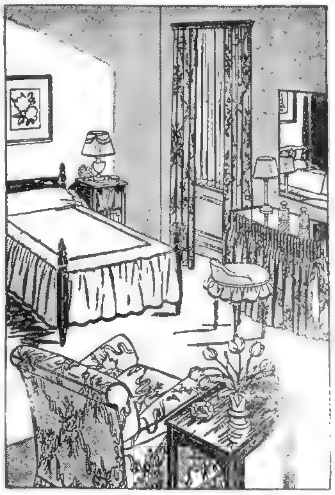
Personality in Bedrooms



GAY ACCESSORIES ARE EASILY MADE

"This room is really mine—I can relax here, and be myself!"

A prominent decorator says she has this feeling of satisfaction every time she steps into her bedroom. The colors are those she likes, and here and there are charming personal touches made by her own hands.

Such personal touches to suit the occupant are often the making of a bedroom. Yet they may be surprisingly inexpensive and easy to work out. To have them you certainly don't need to wait to furnish a whole room. Often a bedroom already furnished will literally leap to new life, if you give the windows a new set of curtains; or make a slip cover for an old chair; or even add colorful pillows.

Hand-Made Touches

But now that it's the fashion for bedroom furnishings to be flounced and frilled, you've got the chance of a life-time to do over a whole bedroom and make the room look absolutely new and lovely! Let's look at the illustration and see some easy ways of doing this.

It's a woman's bedroom. You'd know that at once, wouldn't you? The coloring is as fresh and gay as a spring day in the country. The chintz window hangings have a soft green background patterned in pale yellow, white and hydrangea blue. (A heavenly color combination, if ever there was one!) The dressing table skirt is made of the same material. So is the cover of the slipper chair in the foreground.

Then for a contrast that is both safe and charming the bed and the cover for the dressing table chair are made of pale yellow sateen. This is trimmed at the bottom of the flounce with a banding of hydrangea blue. The simple, tailored glass curtains are made of pale yellow silk gauze.

Don't your fingers just itch to get busy and make these simple, lovely things?

Dear Mrs. Moran:

Thank you, with all my heart, for the happy time that we had with you and your family in your home last evening. You were a perfect hostess and your hospitality was a masterpiece of hospitality.

[illegible] Moran has told us so many glorious things about you that we looked forward with special pleasure to knowing you—and everything that he said was true a thousand-fold!

It was all a memory making occasion—meeting you, meeting again your two gracious daughters, meeting your delightful guests, and having an evening of such good talk and such fine music. I am deeply appreciative, Mrs. Moran.

Every good wish to you, and every blessing.

Bridge

Seeking an Adverse Ruff

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Declarer sometimes finds it to his advantage to allow an opponent to ruff one of his winners.

In today's hand the opponents laughed when South's third spade lead was ruffed by East.

Strangely enough, however, this apparently losing play permitted declarer to make the hand.

East Dealer.
East-West vulnerable.
North-South not vulnerable; part score [illegible].

North: ♠ 10 7 4 ♥ J 5 ◇ 9 8 5 3 2 ♣ 9 5 3
West: ♠ A 8 5 3 2 ♥ 8 2 ◇ 4 ♣ Q J 8 4
East: ♠ 9 6 ♥ K 6 3 ◇ K 10 7 ♣ A K 10 6 2
South: ♠ K Q J ♥ A Q 10 9 7 4 ◇ A Q 6 ♣ 7

The bidding

East	South	West	North
1 ♣	D[illegible]	3 ♣ (1)	Pass
Pass	3 [illegible] (2)	Pass	Pass
Pass

(1) In view of North-South's part score West decides to try to shut out North, even at the cost of concealing the spade suit.

(2) South refuses to be shut out.

He reckons that all he needs from North is a couple of Jacks.

West opened his fourth highest club, East winning with the King. Another club was returned and declarer ruffed.

At this point declarer decided it would do no good to lead the Queen of hearts in an attempt to effect entry to dummy. The better plan was to lead side suits.

Therefore the King of spades was led to Trick 3, West winning with the Ace. The location of this card pretty clearly placed the two red Kings in the East hand. The third round of clubs was led, declarer ruffing.

South cashed the Queen of spades and then led the Jack, East ruffing with great delight. His only safe return at this point was a diamond. Declarer finessed the Queen, cashed the Ace, and led a third diamond.

The opponents were helpless. As [illegible] won with [illegible] his hand held only trumps) and over-ruffing with the Jack in dummy.

A trump lead picked up the King [illegible] doubleton, and [illegible] the rest of the hand, making the contract.

"CHASED WITH DYNAMITE"

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Gosh, boys and girls, here's a story today from a "powder man"—not face powder but the kind they use for blasting—and it concerns a stick of dynamite that came back home to roost.

FLOYD GIBBONS

James Wade of 137 West 110th st., New York, is the man who lives to tell the tale and collect the 10-spot. Jim was working as a powder man back in 1922 B. R. (before repeal) on a road construction gang near Troy, North Carolina.

The construction camp wasn't very far from [illegible] so one Saturday afternoon, in the sunny month of June, Jim set out [illegible] except for his bob tailed houn' [illegible] catch some fish for the camp dinner.

No [illegible] a pretty big mess of fish to satisfy the appetites of a hungry construction gang, but Jim had his own ideas on just h[illegible] the trick. He remembered his father telling him when he [illegible] a boy how he used to catch more fish than he could carry by throwing a stick of dynamite into the water. The explosion stuns them and al[illegible] to do is to gather them in.

Of course it's against the laws but Jim didn't think it would hurt to do a little fish dynamiting for just this once.

So Jim says, he packed a stick of 60 per cent dynamite in his pocket and whistling to his dog headed for the river. He picked himself a nice secluded spot where he wouldn't be apt to be disturbed by the sheriff and figured that when the stunned fish came to the surface the dog ought to make a good retriever.

The dog turned out to be a darned good one.

Jim lit the fuse of that stick of sudden death and flung it out as far as he could throw. Instead of splashing in the water, however, the stick landed on a floating mass of brush. Jim cussed his bad luck but his BAD LUCK WAS ONLY STARTING.

Because, you see, Mr. Dog knew all about that stick throwing game and before Jim could stop him he was in the water and swimming like mad for that STICK OF DYNAMITE!

It didn't take a powder man to know what that meant. It meant that Jim's dog was going to be blown to bits if he ever got that stick in his mouth. Jim liked that bob tailed mutt a lot, he says, but for a few seconds he was too flabbergasted to move Then he woke up and yelled his head off for the dog to stop. He threw sticks of wood in front of him—anything to stop him before it was too late.

But you can't stop a good dog from doing what HE THINKS you want him to do.

THE DOG WAS BRINGING THE DYNAMITE BACK TO HIM!

Jim took one startled look and started to run. He knew what that 60 per cent stick could do to a man and didn't care to have it proved to him. He headed for a clump of trees as f[illegible] he could go. He says he knew his only hope was that the stick would blow up before the dog reached him and yet he dread[illegible] hear the explosion.

Bang! Jim thought it was the stick for a second [illegible] wasn't. It was the sound of a rifle in front of him a[illegible] that someone had seen his plight and was shooting at [illegible] He looked over his shoulder. The dog was still com[illegible] wouldn't be long now.

Then he tripped and fell headlong just as the rifle [illegible] again. He felt his hat ripped from his head and for the [illegible] realized that he was between two fires. Someone was sh[illegible] AT HIM.

Well, sir, Jim says, he just lay where he fell. Life was getting too complicated—and too dangerous then something w[illegible] brushed against him and the dog was there!

Plop! That stick of dynamite dropped RIGHT AT HIS FEET!

Jim says he forgot all about the rifle and grabbed the dynamite hoping he would have time to throw it. Then he sighed with relief and fell back in the bushes. The fuse, he saw, had been torn out and it was harmless!

Wow! What a close call! A man ought to have a stiff drink after an experience like that, Jim thought. He picked up his hat and looked at it. The hat had a nea[illegible] right through the crown!

Jim was mystified but whoever had shot at him was nowhere around so he started on his way. Then in a few steps he saw what it was all about.

He stumbled right on to a moonshiner's still! The moonshiner, Jim thinks, took him for a revenue officer and thinking he had killed a man he had skipped out.

Well, sir, Jim admits he's no saint and he needed a drink anyway so he just helped himself to a five-gallon jug of corn whisky and while the camp didn't have a fish dinner that night, Jim says, they didn't complain

GROUP Players Have Another Hit

The Group Theater—Boston became acquainted with the Group Theater the past fall at the Majestic Theater—has been the butt of the New York wise-crackers for many a theatrical season.

Group Theater players have been fastened with the derisive tag "arty." Stories, and they are true, have been [illegible] the Group Players concentrate on their parts, straining for the mood of the next scene.

George Holland

Last year, the Group Theater answered its spoofers by producing the play which won the Pulitzer Prize, "Men in White." Warner Baxter and Janet Gaynor are the poor but happy pair in the delightful Robert Nathan comedy, "One More Spring," screen attraction at the Paramount and Fenway.

Azucar's Victory in Hearst Film

In one of the most thrilling pictures ever filmed of a horse race, Hearst Metrotone News, now on the screen at Loew's State and Orpheum, shows Azucar, 13 to 1 shot, winning the rich Santa Anita Handicap at Arcadia, Calif.

With Twenty Grand, Equipoise, Ladysman and other favorites carrying the heavy betting, Azucar steals the honors from the post, with a crowd of more than 50,000 cheering fans. Edwin C. Hill, the Globe Trotter, describes the exciting event in his graphic manner.

Wiley Post in his unsuccessful stratosphere flight is pictured and described by the Globe Trotter, and in New York's Madison Square Garden there are striking pictures of Glenn Cunningham shattering the 1500-meter mark in the A. A. U. Games.

Rome's famous ballet, a newly invented mechanical horse, and the renovation of the Washington monument at the national capitol are among the other news events of interest and importance included in the current Hearst movie news.

HANEY SEES

Courts Checking New Deal

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, March 1—The recent court decisions concerning attempts by NRA to regulate labor relations and other business matters, are important.

They furnish another illustration of the fact that the nation, under the New Deal, is at the cross roads.

The New Dealers are running into the Constitution as interpreted by the courts. What will the result be? Will they step up their program, swing left, and drive ahead? Or will they slow down and retreat to a more conservative position?

Take the Weirton case, for example. In this case a U. S. district court has just decided on two points:

1—It holds that the Weirton Steel Company has not violated Section 7-A of the NRA act in co-operating with a "company union." It did not coerce its employes. The decision in this respect means that "company unions" may be legal and proper agencies for representing employes in collective bargaining with employers.

This will hurt the A. F. of L., but the New Dealers will not care much about that. They are after bigger game. They are chiefly concerned with the other point in the case, which involves central government control over business in general.

(2) In the Weirton case, it is held that section 7-A is unconstitutional as applied to a manufacturing business. The court holds that the section cannot be applied as an exercise of the power of the Federal government to regulate "interstate commerce."

This decision, if sustained in the Supreme Court, would be a body blow to the New Dealers. In fact, one of their attorneys proclaims that it is based upon an "outmoded" interpretation of the Constitution. Not only NRA, but the utility holding company bill, and the whole New Deal tendency to centralize control over business, are involved.

One of the main reliances of the "smart" New Deal lawyers is the so-called interstate commerce clause of the Constitution. They are trying to extend it by calling everything that goes on in business "interstate commerce," and then justify federal control on that basis. Moreover, they argue that if anything merely "affects" interstate commerce, they can control it, too! Thus they would regiment practically all business.

But the judge now says:

"In a number of cases the Supreme Court has declared that the commerce clause of the Constitution cannot be construed to bring within the regulatory power of Congress the entire industrial life of the nation."

He rules that regulating manufacture involves regulating all industry, and therefore exceeds federal powers.

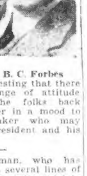
CONGRESS SPLITS WITH PRESIDENT

Honeymoon Is Over

By B. C. FORBES

"The Presidential-Congressional honeymoon is over," opined one business man. Others in the group agreed.

"Yes," he went on: "Congress gave the new presidential bride everything she asked for at first. She asked for plenty—but she promised still more. The results haven't been all that was expected. Miracles have ceased to be performed. The bridegroom has begun to question the wisdom of the bride's phenomenally heavy expenditures. He has even started to refuse her requests—a sure sign that the honeymoon has ended."



B. C. Forbes

The Senate's adverse vote on the administration's World Court recommendation, the rough handling of the President's plea to be allowed nearly five billions to be spent entirely as he might choose, the criticism of proposals to give bureaucrats a stranglehold on the nation's banking, and other recent events were next discussed as significant, as suggesting that there has set in a change of attitude indicating that the folks back home are no longer in a mood to lynch any lawmaker who may differ from the President and his associates.

Then another man, who has achieved success in several lines of business, tossed this statement into the discussion:

"The people don't usually vote for somebody, but against somebody. What does that mean, looking ahead to next year's election?

"It means that President Roosevelt will have to be able to point to a very substantial reduction in unemployment, if he hopes to win hands-down.

"He showed quite wonderful results at the start, everybody cheerfully and gratefully admits. But we all know that things have not been making satisfactory progress for some time. Responsible men are afraid to risk putting fresh capital into enterprise; they know that the bulk of any profit which may be made will be taken from them in taxes, and they don't know when some new legislation or some new development in regard to organized labor or costs may upset all their calculations.

"There seems to be signs that investors are scared. When individuals and families with savings ready for employment note what is happening to investors in public utilities, they ask themselves whether other industries may not be taken in hand by Washington and put through the wringer. Most large corporations are actually holding companies in the legal sense.

"The Department of Justice and the administration lately have been showing their hand—in their objection to the Republic Steel merger, in their attitude toward investment trusts, in the general atmosphere at Washington concerning large-scale business."

He went on:

"What has all this to do with the next presidential election? I'll tell you.

"President Roosevelt cannot hope to ride very much farther simply by denouncing the old order, by condemning others.

"He himself must show results. He must make the New Deal work better than it has been working. He must bring about a real revival of employment—private employment.

"Unless he can accomplish this, no amount of fault-finding with past conditions and methods, no amount of mere promises of a Utopia some day in the future, will satisfy the millions and millions of unemployed or wage earners or investors who have suffered heavy losses or small business men who are struggling against the higher costs imposed by codes or employers who don't know what next may be sprung on them by Washington.

"Remember, though the farm vote is mighty important, it does not match the combined vote of all other classes."

BOND MARKET

Governments Up

New York, March 1 (AP)—Strength of U. S. governments was counterbalanced by scattered selling of rails in the bond market today. After recovering for the past two days, rails were inclined to sag.

There was no repetition of the active selling of early in the week, however, as it was more widely recognized that few of the roads, despite unfavorable earnings, have any very pressing cash requirements in the near future.

Yesterday's petition to reorganize the Chicago Great Western and decision to default by the Rio Grande, put two of the immediate situations into the background.

TELEPHONE Pays LIBERAL Rate

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

It may be that the solicitude of American Telephone officials for oft mentioned widows and orphans owning the company's stock is mythical. But it can't be proven by the company's statement.

In 1934 dividends paid exceeded earnings by $53,792,000. In other words the directors authorized dipping into surplus in order to maintain the regular $9 per share rate. Other features of the statement of operations released today are the increase of 2 per cent in phones in use and a gain of 4.6 per cent in the total number of long distance calls.

Henry I. Harriman

The uproar against the Senate reactionaries, who tied up the work relief bill in knots, grows daily. A former Bostonian, Henry I. Harriman, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, has added his voice. He asks people to let Congress know that they resent needless extravagance on relief work. At the same time one notices that Mr. Harriman seizes his opportunity to say a word or two on the dole. His idea is that if relief is not given as the President wants it resort should be had to the dole.

* * *

Notebook: The effort to arouse the public ire on the work relief bill is succeeding . . . But the delay in enacting the legislation in proper form is hurting business . . . Almost every form of business today in projecting its future allows for a certain amount of trade with those on relief . . . Until the status of these customers, either directly or indirectly contacted, is ascertained, business and consequently the markets will be uneasy.

* * *

From a technical angle the market has apparently exhausted itself. Now it would seem that fundamentals must change for the better, or long range cheerful news break, before much can be expected. We are not preaching bearishness but caution has been our constant warning for some weeks, and we see no real reason to alter it in the slightest. We will sit quietly by until there appears to be real cause to do some buying.

* * *

Shorts: Minneapolis-Honeywell is an issue to keep track of . . . An international factor in the air-conditioning industry . . . York Ice Machinery preferred, which we chose some months ago as a good speculation in the air-conditioning industry, is still doing well . . . After a rise of over 300 per cent from the 4 level at which we called it to attention . . . That U. S. Industrial Alcohol dividend will not hurt Air Reduction with its big holdings.

Foreign Markets Move Up

London, March 1 (AP)—Trading on the stock exchange today was stimulated by the one shilling rise in bar gold, on which gold mining shares were actively bought, while Kaffirs marked new high records. Industrials benefited on favorable trade reports, while giltedged securities although supported, eased later in the session.

Copper shares advanced in anticipation of a favorable outcome of the copper conference. Other sections eased. The market closed irregular.

Paris—Trading on the Bourse today was slow although prices advanced, especially rentes, copper shares and French stocks. Diamond issues were strong on favorable Amsterdam news. The market closed active and strong.

Berlin—Prices on the Boerse were firm throughout the session, and the closing was quiet but sustained.

CURB MARKET

Trading Active

New York, March 1 (AP)—Speculative sentiment showed further improvement on the Curb market today and active demand for a number of selected utilities, industrials and metals brought advances ranging from ½ to 2 points.

Murphy Company advanced 3 points on small sales, Perfect Circle was 2 higher and improvement of around ½ occurred in American Gas, Lake Shore Mines, Pioneer Gold and Parker Rust Proof.

Sherwin Williams and Swift & Co. each dipped a trifle in early dealings, but showed signs of steadying at the end of the first hour. Electric Bond & Share and Creole Petroleum held unchanged after advancing moderately at the opening.

Crude Rubber

New York, March 1 (AP)—Crude rubber futures opened barely steady, 5 to 7 lower.

Freeport Texas Net $1,477,089

Report of Freeport Texas Co. and wholly-owned subsidiaries (producers of sulphur) for year ended December 31, 1934, certified by independent auditors, shows net income of $1,477,089 after depreciation, federal taxes, etc., equivalent after deducting $77,173 dividends paid on 6 per cent preferred stocks to $1.76 a share (par $10) on average number of common shares outstanding during the year.

Based on 796,380 common shares outstanding at close of year, net income is equal after preferred dividends to $1.75 a share.

This compares with net income in 1933 of $2,478,839, equal to $3.14 a share on average common shares outstanding during the year, and $3.01 a share on 784,663 common shares outstanding at end of that year.

Current assets as of December 31, 1934, amounted to $7,680,834, and current liabilities were $2,276,889, against $8,626,293 and $2,587,545, respectively, at end of preceding year. At close of 1934 cash was $1,125,589, against $2,648,377 on December 31, 1933.

Southern Pacific Ferries

During 1934 the Southern Pacific Golden Gate Ferries, Ltd., operating between San Francisco and Oakland, Calif., carried 4,975,237 vehicles and 13,011,112 passengers, increases of 175,497 and 360,206 vehicles and passengers respectively, over 1933.

METAL Shares Start RALLY

OTHER GROUPS RECOVER

New York, March 1—Strength of the metals, a few preferred issues and scattered specialties helped the stock market to keep on ith feet today.

There were a number of soft spots, however, and the late tone was irregular.

Homestake Mining got up 9 points, U. S. Smelting 3, Howe Sound 2, and McIntyre Porcupine, American Smelting and Cerro De Pasco about 1 each.

United Corp. preferred and Commonwealth & Southern preferred recovered a point or so each.

Canada Dry, Johns-Manville and American Can lost as much.

Coca Cola rose more than 4 points to the best price in years. American Safety Razor hit a new record high. Columbia Pictures bettered its 1934-35 peak.

Motor shares were sluggish.

Standard Oil of New Jersey rose more than a point.

Canada Dry hit a new low on rumors the dividend might be omitted.

Allied Chemical rose more than a point.

Trade Unchanged

That trade movements during the week indicated no pronounced trend caused little surprise in Wall Street. The advance in production was extended in some sections, although the irregular weather left volume of distribution about unchanged, Dun & Bradstreet reported.

Observers were unable to explain the increase in brokers' loans of $38,000,000 in terms of the recently declining stock prices. In some circles the idea was advanced that the higher loan total was connected with larger holdings of United States government securities by dealers.

Net income of the American Telephone & Telegraph was about in line with Wall Street expectations. It equalled $6.52 a share in 1934, against $7.37 in 1933.

While some cheer was taken from the report that collections and installations had improved, enthusiasm was tempered by the higher wage bill shown.

The pound sterling opened ⅛ of a cent higher at $4.84. The French franc was off .01 of a cent at 6.64½ cents.

Boston Market

MIXED TONE IN DULLNESS

The Boston Stock Exchange opened today with trading at an extremely dull pace. Changes held to small fractions and few issues made an appearance on the tape.

New Haven scored an additional small gain of ⅜, at 4⅞.

United Shoe held at close to the previous closing of 75⅝, while New England Telephone on scattered activity managed to gain ¼, to 94½.

Leased rails, after their losses of Thursday, were absent from the tape.

GRAINS RALLY

Late in Day

Chicago, March 1 (AP)—Grain quotations averaged lower today, but recovered in late evening up dealings, and in sympathy with wheat price rallies at Winnipeg.

Many traders were uncertain owing to a jump in gold to an all time record high at London. New legislative measures discussed at Washington, Ottawa, Canada, and Springfield, Ill., served as a trade handicap during much of the day.

COTTON

New York, March 1 (AP)—Cotton was only moderately active today with prices sagging slightly under comparatively light offerings which seemed to be coming from foreign and southern sources. May sold down from 12.42 to 12.36 cents and ruled around that level at 2 o'clock when active months were generally 1 to 4 points net lower.

J. P. Morgan Selling; What's the Reason?

AN ABLE person is Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, son of an able father. Both father and son have known how to gather things in, at the right time.

Without prying into Mr. Morgan's private affairs, it may be permissible to wonder why it is that Mr. Morgan has suddenly become a DISTRIBUTOR, from being a collector.

First he sold five paintings for $1,500,000.

He is now offering country real estate in Long Island at $15,000 an acre. It takes a good salesman to sell any country land at $15,000 an acre now.

The latest news is that Mr. Morgan has ordered a sale at auction, in London, of 900 small paintings on ivory, admirable samples of the work of different artists over a period of 400 years.

The little pictures are expected to sell for about $600,000.

Questions arise in connection with these sales of pictures, real estate and miniatures.

Such a man as J. P. Morgan cannot NEED MONEY. He knows as little as Croesus ever did about being "hard up." So what is the underlying idea? Others would like to know, for their guidance.

Does wise Mr. Morgan think that with so much uncertainty in the world the best thing to have is CASH?

IS Mr. Morgan by any chance disturbed by Huey Long's "Share the wealth" suggestion; does he think it might come true?

Senator Long says that "Nobody can have more than $3,000,000." Saying that to Mr. Morgan is like saying to Senator Huey Long, "You can't have more than nineteen cents."

Mr. Morgan takes a wide view of the world.

He saw the King of Spain stripped of his wealth. Mr. Morgan also is a king in his way. He saw the Czar of Russia not only stripped of his wealth, but killed, Stalin in a workman's smock taking charge of gigantic Russia, defying all Europe and all capitalism successfully.

He sees Hitler, a house painter from Vienna, only recently a German citizen, taking charge of the former Kaiser's former empire.

He sees Mussolini in absolute control of life and property in Italy.

HERE in America he sees 12,000,000 men idle, after futile efforts to put them to work, spending billions of public money.

He sees a system of government in which the first prize goes to the man who can invent a new kind of tax, or make some tax heavier.

Mr. Morgan has his reasons for telling the auctioneers to ask "How much am I bid?" If he will tell us about them, when he has finished his selling, all will be much obliged.

A Foolish Idea
Suffers a Knockdown

A poet many years ago wrote that Truth, crushed to earth, ould rise again.

Foolish ideas also pop up from time to time.

An example of 1935 is the suggestion made by a high State official that speed governors be made compulsory equipment for automobiles.

Registrar Frank A. Goodwin told the legislative Committee on Highways and Motor Vehicles that the idea was "foolish and unnecessary."

He pointed to the fact that his office has the power to bar from the highways any automobile operated at unreasonable speed.

It will not bar ALL automobiles that speed against reason.

They will not ALL come to the attention of the registrar.

But those who are caught will find the "governor" clamped on the driver rather than on the automobile. As it should be.

A Bill to Speed Up
Merrimack Valley Plan

The Massachusetts State Senate this week showed the right spirit in co-operating with Governor Curley on the Merrimack Valley project.

The Senate suspended its rules to allow Senators Meehan of Lawrence, McCarty of Lowell and McAree of Haverhill to introduce on behalf of the Governor the Merrimack bill.

This provides for establishment of the Merrimack Valley Authority to co-operate with the Granite State in the proposed $40,000,000 development.

The bill lies with the Committee on State Legislation. Its importance calls for a display of speed.

If Europe Paid
Would We Be Sick?

Robert Lincoln O'Brien, Boston chairman of the United States Tariff Commission, wants us to increase our imports.

In a recent speech Mr. O'Brien declared that more than a billion dollars in gold was poured into this country during the first 11 months of 1934.

He declared that a situation so "unhealthy" cannot continue, and that results will be hard for us unless more products are imported.

If getting a billion dollars was "unhealthy," how sick we would be if Europe ever got into a retaliatory mood—and paid us its post-war debts!

When Every Day's a Month
You Know the Feeling

The moon, astronomers have discovered, is applying brakes on the spin of the earth. Some day our days will be a month long.

"The day," says Professor Nicholson, of California, "is now lengthening at the rate of one-thousandth of a second per century."

That may be the reason why hours at work seem so long. But we guess the real reason is that Spring is not far away.

Lady, I'm riding through those mill towns at this very moment, and there's nothing I want more to do than to tell "that side of the picture."

CRUELIST OF LIES

I could fill this paper just telling that side, and the editor would want me to if people like you would listen. But you won't listen.

You don't want to hear the truth. You just want to hear something that will excuse your own stupid, heartless greediness.

"They could be clean. They could have flowers, even if they are poor."

I've heard those statements ever since I was a child—and they're the cruelest of lies.

I'm telling you, lady—when you've been bone poor all your life; when your father's been poor before you and his father before him; then there's nothing in your thin, waterly blood and your weak, crumbly bones and your starved, bewildered brain but the gnawing of poverty year after year—you CAN'T be clean or tidy.

You CAN'T have dreams in your head or pride in your heart or flowers at your door.

A cornered animal and a dying man are interested in just one thing. They don't care whether they're dirty or ragged. They don't give a hoot about their surroundings.

They're thinking of just one thing—thinking of it frantically, furiously—and that one thing is life. And there's nothing they won't do to get it.

There's the "other side of the story" you think I haven't told, lady: that tragic side you and your kind ignore. But it's my bet that you won't always ignore it.

Some day—and it won't be long now—something's going to start in those ugly, hopeless lives that is likely to land kerplunk on your silly, fat neck and let in a li'l light, maybe, through your thick, complacent skull.

But no one has had the Mann technique since that bewhiskered rascal passed from the mortal scene. A weekly tried similar tactics in modified form in the Times Square area but its editor was soon crated off to Atlanta.

Nutty tipsy tale. Two drunks weaving home after midnight argue whether the moon shining so brightly is the moon or sun. They decided to ask the next man they met. He lurched out of a saloon and they put the question.

The Whipping Post
Human Side of the News
By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

The perennial discussion of the whipping post bobs up in Delaware, where it is constantly in use as a punishment for criminals, at a time when the death is noted of one of the firmest advocates of the lash, Judge Joseph Corrigan of New York.

Edwin C. Hill

The question before the Delaware Legislature is not the abolition of the whipping post, but the restriction of the number of witnesses at the scene.

In the sub-freezing temperature of the last January 19, three young robbers were publicly flogged at the New Castle Workhouse before a crowd of one hundred persons.

One by one they were stripped to the waist, and walked hurriedly from a tunnel from the main prison into a small enclosed yard. It took five seconds for the warden to apply the strokes.

SENT TO HOSPITAL

Each then went to the hospital to have his back treated for soreness which would last about three days. In addition the three prisoners have three years to serve for the robbery and beating of an elderly farmer.

Public sentiment in Delaware is for the whipping post, which has been used in the state since colonial times.

However, the women's clubs are agitating that it is degrading and disgraceful to permit scores of the morbid and curious to witness the infliction of the cat and nine tails. They ask that the punishment be private.

Elmer Leach, warden of the Delaware Penitentiary, is against the custom. However, the fact that there are now three whipping posts in the state, as against one 10 years ago, shows that his agitation for abolishment has fallen on deaf ears.

He claims that it is not a deterrent and that it interfers with the moral rehabilitation of the criminal.

His predecessor, Warden Crawford, held the opposite view. Crawford laid on the whip with a heavy hand, and the backs of the culprits were seared from neck to waist.

"I don't like to do it," he said. "It isn't a pleasant thing to whip a man, but it is the law and a good law. It keeps the crooks out of the state."

Delaware law provides whipping for most of the crimes of violence, such as 60 lashes for poisoning, 5 to 20 lashes for wife-beating and 40 for highway robbery.

Judges, grand juries and law enforcement societies in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania have asked recently that the whipping post be established in their states.

Judge Corrigan advocated an electric whipping machine to eliminate any possibility of brutalizing the man inflicting the punishment.

In one of his several tales on the subject, he told the Chicago Bar Association that corporal punishment has many advantages and that there is no valid argument against it.

Judge Corrigan pointed out that a flogging, more than anything else, would destroy the false glamour of heroism which surrounded the racketeer and the gangster.

In England the lash is an old, historic form of punishment and is in more use than ever before. Jailers there take the law literally, so much so that in recent weeks the country was stirred by the suicide of a convict in Dartmoor because of his fear of an impending 12 strokes.

He left the note:

"My head goes just like a clock before it strikes, and I shake awful. The policeman in my head keeps lashing me every night. I cannot rest or sleep; keep starting up, feeling the lash across my body. My mind is in agony."

The coroner was shocked by the case, and it was called up in the House of Commons. Thereupon, a writer in the New Statesman and Nation offered the comment that the affair provided "magnificent evidence for the effectiveness of flogging as a punishment and should, if we were logical, result in a demand for the extension of this penalty for further offenses."

New Deal Is a 'Raw Deal' for Our Air Agency

By JAMES T. WILLIAMS, JR.

One of the handicaps under which the leadership of President Roosevelt suffers today is the downright disloyalty to the high purposes of his administration on the part of some of the political appointees foisted upon the President by unwise political advisers.

Secretary Roper

A flagrant sample of this disloyalty is to be found in the Department of Commerce. This is the department charged by law with the responsibility of regulating and developing commercial aviation. This power and responsibility, the air commerce act of 1926 gives to the Secretary of Commerce.

WAS WELL ORGANIZED

When Mr. Roper became Secretary of Commerce, he found in existence, a well-organized and efficiently administered aeronautics branch.

This branch was under the supervision of an assistant secretary of commerce for aeronautics, who was splendidly qualified to assist the secretary in the discharge of his duties under the air commerce act of 1926.

Secretary Roper abolished the office of Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Aeronautics and turned over the supervision of the aeronautics branch to an obscure lawyer from a small town in the Middle West.

His claim to preferment was that he had opposed the giving of instructions to the Missouri delegation for former Senator James A. Reed for President.

This is the political incompetent who has aided and abetted from the beginning the disruption of the aeronautics branch by the group of political racketeers whose activities come under his supervision.

This is the political incompetent who tried to get rid of all the physicians and surgeons designated on the basis of their professional branch. They were to be gotten rid of in order that they might be replaced with political doctors having the endorsement of their national committeeman, state chairman and senators in Congress.

PRESIDENT INTERVENED

The only reason these dismissals did not take place was because the President intervened after the highest medical authorities throughout the country appealed to the White House.

But six months later, in January, 1934—in the name of economy and efficiency, this same political incompetent then started a new series of dismissals of the trained and experienced personnel which organized and developed the aeronautics branch to the high point of efficiency it had attained when Secretary Roper became responsible.

Early last month a new series of dismissals from the aeronautics branch was ordered in what is designed to be a final drive to get rid of every competent member of the aeronautics branch who does not owe his appointment to the approval of the political incompetent whom Secretary Roper permits to supervise this vital federal agency.

An agency set up to safeguard the lives of all American pilots and their passengers.

POLITICAL RACKETEERS

When this political incompetent undertakes to justify the disruption of the aeronautics branch by himself and his political racketeers, he is alleged to do so in this wise:

That the New Deal means to him a new dispensing of federal offices under which the "Ins" will be thrown out and the "Outs" will get their jobs.

The fact that this is the only interpretation of the New Deal under which a man so lacking in any qualification to supervise so important an agency could ever have received an appointment which he now holds apparently has quickened his zeal to make this kind of a raw deal general throughout the aeronautics branch.

If the political racketeering which has well nigh wrecked the aeronautics branch involved only postmasterships, collectorships and the like, it would be bad enough, but it would not put in jeopardy the lives of all Americans who fly as pilots or passengers.

But wrecking the aeronautics branch by political racketeering is not merely in complete conflict with the high ideals of public administration to which the leadership of the President is pledged, it is highly dangerous to every pilot who flies the colors of the mails and to their every passenger.

Secretary Roper cannot escape the blame for this condition of affairs in his own department, because he cannot delegate to the political incompetent whom he has appointed supervisor of the aeronautics branch the single responsibility which is his under the law to regulate in the public interest and for the public safety of commercial aviation.
